Preface

The following study describes the forms of Gaṇeśa/Gaṇapati occurring in the Vidyārṇavatantra (= VT), a large compilation on mantraśāstra attributed to Vidyāraṇya Yati. This text gives the iconographic peculiarities, mantras, and yantras of the special forms of Gaṇeśa as well as instructions for the ritual application of the mantras. The information gathered from this text has been compared with descriptions found in other Tantras and works on iconography. I have also tried to include references to visual representations of such forms as far as they agree with the description in the VT. In 1986 I undertook two trips to South India, where I examined photographs of Gaṇeśa sculptures kept in the archives of the Institut français d'indologie, Pondicherry, and visited many important temples to photograph the sculptures. In the same year I consulted the photo archives of the American Institute of Indian Studies, Ramnagar-Varanasi, and visited museums in North India, such as Mathura, Gwalior, and Khajuraho, to obtain further material. However, identification of the sculptures presents many problems as the attributes are not always clear and the sculptures are often mutilated. Very few specimens agree with the descriptions provided in the VT.

Although the number of publications dealing with Gaṇeśa is not insignificant, the Tantric aspect of this deity has not been investigated and a study from this point of view is necessary. Gaṇeśa is also worshipped in South-East Asia, Nepal, Tibet, and Japan, but only material from India has been included here for comparison.[1]

For valuable suggestions I am indebted to Prof. K.S. Arjunwadkar and Dr. R.P. Goswami, Pune. I wish to thank Charles Pain, Berkeley, for improving my English; the staff members of the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Pune, and the Institut français d'indologie, Pondicherry, and particularly Dr. N.R. Bhatt, for their cooperation; Dr. S.S. Janaki, Madras (Chennai), for providing some information in connection with Muthusvami Dikshitar's compositions; the staff members of the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, Madras (Chennai), for providing a transcript of a chapter of the Prayogasāra; and the University Manuscripts Library, Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram), for allowing me to consult a manuscript of the Yantrasāra. Finally, I wish to thank the Indian Council of Historical Research, Delhi, for supporting my research with a grant.

Foreword to the Reissue of this Book

This edition is in large part a reissue of my book Forms of Gaṇeśa: A Study Based on the Vidyārṇavatantra (published in 1989 by the Institut für Indologie, Wichtrach, Switzerland) with minor corrections and updated information worked into the text. The original edition, which is out of print now, received positive book reviews in academic journals but had only a limited circulation. It has not been available in South Asia due to the absence of a distributor and the high cost of the book.

Although a number of books and articles on Gaṇeśa have appeared in recent years, adding to an already large body of literature on the deity, only a few take original Sanskrit texts on Gaṇeśa into consideration. The Tantric aspects of the deity have certainly been studied too little. I hope that this book will contribute to our knowledge of this less familiar side of him. Since the publication of Forms of Gaṇeśa, I brought out the two-volume work The Iconography of Hindu Tantric Deities (Groningen, 2000–2001) in which descriptions of deities have been extracted from the Prapañcasāra, Śāradātilaka and Mantramahodadhi — among them, several Tantric forms of Gaṇeśa. Volume I of the work (pp. 4 and 14) includes some new research on the date of the Vidyārṇavatantra (which I chose to call Śrīvidyārṇavatantra in that volume), suggesting that the Tantra was compiled after 1588 and before 1726.

Introduction

Apart from one-headed, four-armed forms of Gaṇeśa (also known as Gaṇapati or Vināyaka), which are commonly found all over India, many forms of this deity exist with 2, 6, 8, 10, 12, 18 or more arms and with 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 heads. These forms are represented either alone or in the company of one or two consorts.[1] Many of these forms are described in the Tantric texts but do not appear to be represented in art; others are depicted in sculpture or painting but their textual descriptions have not yet been discovered or may never have existed. Today the worship of Gaṇeśa is most prominent in South India (especially Tamil Nadu and Kerala) and Maharashtra. In Maharashtra four-armed forms and sometimes a ten-armed form called Daśabhuja-Gaṇapati are worshipped, while in South India a variety of forms are represented in sculpture and worshipped: e.g. a ten-armed form with a consort, sitting on a lotus (often called Vallabhā-Gaṇapati), or a ten-armed form with five heads, sitting on a rat. Many of the forms found in South Indian temples have been eulogized by the musician Muthusvami Dikshitar (CE 1775–1835), who was initiated in the Tantric tradition. His descriptions of these forms in Sanskrit verses reflect the teachings of mantraśāstra. So far 26 of his compositions (kṛti) on Gaṇapati have been discovered; these have yet to be studied and analysed critically.[2]

1. The iconography of these forms has been described in RAO 1914-16, 1, pp. 35-67, on the basis of the Kriyākramadyoti (= KKD), a few śilpaśāstra texts, and the Mantramahārṇava (= MM) — altogether an important but incomplete contribution. The iconography of Gaṇeśa is briefly referred to in KHARE 1939, pp. 154-66, SRINIVASAN 1954, pp. 86-89, and BANERJEA ²1956, pp. 354-61. Some material was collected by GETTY 1936. This book was written without the knowledge of Sanskrit and the Tantric texts written in this language. SEETHARAM 1952 contains more information but is unreliable in many places.

2. These are found scattered in the Saṃgīta-Saṃpradāya Pradarśinī (ed. S. DĪKṢITAR, 5 pts., Madras 1961-83) and in Śrī-Dīkṣita-Kīrtana-Mālā (ed. A.S. IYER, Madras 1979). Some remarks on these songs are found in JANAKI 1986.

3. This description is attributed to the Mudgala Purāṇa but cannot be traced in the printed edition of the Purāṇa from Pune. It may, however, occur in a local version of the Purāṇa or perhaps form part of some text which is ascribed to this Purāṇa. It should be pointed out that the description of 13 Gaṇapatis of the first group of 16 forms, which occurs in the ŚTN, already appears in the KKD. The text of the KKD is quoted according to RAO 1914-16, 1, appendix C, pp. 7-12. Further parallels may be discovered when a critical edition of the KKD becomes available.

In addition to single forms of Gaṇapati, there are also groups of Gaṇapatis. Of great importance to the South Indian tradition is a group of 16 Gaṇapatis. With small variations in the names, the 16 forms frequently occur in texts regarding rites of pratiṣṭhā and are occasionally depicted on the walls of contemporary temples. The table on page 2 provides the names of the 16 forms according to a number of sources. These 16 forms comprise the first half of the group of 32 Gaṇapatis, according to one source, the Śrītattvanidhi (= ŚTN).

11 Gaṇapatis of the group of 16 are depicted in stucco on the inner wall of the contemporary Pazhavangadi-Vināyaka Temple, Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram):

4. Chapter 55 of the Ajitāgama, entitled ṣoḍaśagaṇapatisthāpana-vidhi, belongs to the Kriyāpāda. It is preserved only in some manuscripts.
5. According to transcript 232, kept in the library of the Institut français d'indologie, Pondicherry. The original palm leaf manuscript in grantha characters belongs to Rajamani Gurukkal, Peramber Kandikai, Madurantakam Dist. (fol. 32a and 32b).
6. According to transcript 105, kept in the library of the Institut français d'indologie, Pondicherry. The original palm leaf manuscript in grantha characters belongs to C. Swaminatha Śivācārya, South Indian Arcakas' Association, Madras (Chennai) (fol. 1b).
7. These contemporary paintings on the ceiling depict each Gaṇapati separately.
8. These stucco wall reliefs are of recent origin.
9. Taruṇa-Gaṇapati is missing in this list.
10. Nartana-G. occurs twice in this list.

Line drawings of the 16 forms are reproduced in the Gaṇeśkoś, pp. 248-51, and in other books. Contemporary paintings of the 32 forms are found in DEŚIKAR ²1984, line drawings in Glory of Ganesha, pp. 87-118, STHAPATI 1981, and other sources. Noteworthy are the paintings in the Mysore manuscript of the Śrītattvanidhi, recently published in vol. 3 (Śivanidhi) of the Śrītattvanidhi (Mysore 2004), fols. 110b-114b. There exist considerable differences in the description and depiction of these 16 or 32 forms, according to the various sources. Not all sources can be dealt with here as this would require a separate study. Therefore, I can only summarize here the description of the 32 Gaṇapatis given in the ŚTN.

32 Forms of Gaṇapati according to the ŚTN[11]

11. I have utilized only the edition of the ŚTN published by the Venkatesvara Press. Another version of the text with an English translation is found in vol. 3 (Śivanidhi) of the Śrītattvanidhi (Mysore 2004), pp. 56-83 and 182-92. The attributes of Gaṇapati given in the table are listed in the sequence in which they occur in the Skt. text. Only occasionally do we find references to the distribution of the attributes in Gaṇapati's hands and trunk. Such references have been given in brackets (e.g. R = right [hand], L = left [hand]).

A group of 32 forms of Gaṇapati, which has nothing in common iconographically with the 32 forms described in the ŚTN, is depicted on the top parapet of the prākāra wall (north-west corner) of the Nañjuṇḍeśvara (also: Śrīkaṇṭheśvara) Temple dedicated to Śiva in Nañjangūḍ, a place 16 miles south of Mysore. This wall, which is built in Dravidian style, dates from about CE 1850.[14] The names of the 32 forms inscribed on the wall are not mentioned in any textual source I know of. The 32 names are listed below:[15]

51 Gaṇeśas with consorts are assigned to different parts of the body in the Tantric gaṇeśanyāsa, which forms part of the sixfold nyāsa (ṣoḍhānyāsa) consisting of nyāsa with the names of the Gaṇeśas, the heavenly bodies, lunar mansions, Yoginīs, constellations (rāśi), and sacred places (pīṭha). The names of the Gaṇeśas are given here according to the Yoginīhṛdaya 3.14-19 and the names of the consorts according to one manuscript quoted in the edition of Amṛtānanda's Dīpikā, p. 201, 6-15, on the text:[20]

	Name of Gaṇeśa	Consort		Name of Gaṇeśa	Consort

20. The names are also listed in NP 66.124-37 and N, pp. 77, 13 – 78, 32 with minor variations in the names of the Gaṇeśas and major differences in the names of the consorts; 50 Gaṇeśas and their śaktis, deities of the alphabet, whose names [illegible] given in the above mentioned texts are listed in

The Gaṇapatis are red, have three eyes, and carry a noose and goad in the upper hands and show the wish-granting gesture and the gesture of protection with the lower hands.

In the Gaṇeśa Purāṇa (Uttarārdha, 42.11-13) we read that Gaṇeśa assumed 56 forms while fighting with the demon (rākṣasa) Durāsada. These forms differed as to the number of their heads and the animal they used as a vehicle (vāhana). These are the well-known 56[21] Vināyakas[22] who were established in the seven enclosures (āvaraṇa) around Ḍhuṇḍirāja in the centre of the maṇḍala of Kāśī in order to protect the city. Their names are listed in the Skanda Purāṇa (= SkP), Kāśīkhaṇḍa, 57.43-114 (in Nārāyaṇabhaṭṭa's Tristhalīsetu, pp. 198, 28 – 199, 30, following the Kāśīkhaṇḍa), and in the Merutantra (= MT) 19.103-500 (passage is said to belong to the Western [paścima] āmnāya). The account in the MT is particularly interesting as it gives the names and *mantra*s of the Vināyakas along with their *śakti*s and often gives details of the ritual connected with the *mantra*s.

A list of 51 forms of Gaṇeśas (the title says 51 forms; the actual number is 58) with consorts from a Kulāmṛta is printed in PAL 1981, pp. 142-45. PAL states that a similar list from the Jñānārṇava is quoted in (probably a Bengali edition of) the TS. I could not identify such a list in the edition of the TS from Varanasi or in the Bṛhat-tantrasāra.

21. MT 19.3 states that there are 64 Vināyakas forming eight enclosures with eight deities each. The text is corrupt; but the list in MT 19.103-500 and a remark in 19.493 show that the tradition of 56 Vināyakas is followed.

22. Here the name Vināyaka is equivalent to Gaṇapati. At an earlier stage (cf. Mānava-Gṛhyasūtra 2.14) there existed a separate concept of four Vināyakas, a group of malevolent demons.

SUKUL 1977, pp. 100 ff., has made an attempt to identify the places of these Vināyakas in contemporary Varanasi. His excellent study provides photographs of sculptures of some of these forms.

Still today the worship of the 56 Vināyakas is recommended for a pilgrimage performed on the fourth day of either half of the month, and especially once a year on the 14th day of the bright half of the month of Māgha.

56 forms of Gaṇapati (as the total number of existing forms of this deity) are referred to in Nīlakaṇṭha's commentary on the Gaṇeśa-Gītā, p. 181, 2. An idol of any of these forms made from clay can be worshipped.

Six Gaṇapatis, viz. Mahā-G. (1), Haridrā-G. (2), Ucchiṣṭa-G. and Heramba (3), Navanīta-G. (4), Svarṇa-G. (5), and Saṃtāna-G. (6) are said to have been worshipped by six sects of worshippers of Gaṇapati with special *mantra*s and rituals in Anantānandagiri's Śaṃkaravijaya (14th cent. CE[37]), ch. 15-18. This author narrates that Śaṃkara met teachers of these sects in a place called Gaṇavara(pura) at the river Kaumudī (p. 79, 13-15).

32. Om. MT.
33. Om. MT.
34. Om. MT.
35. This name, which occurs as no. 9 of this enclosure, makes the total number of deities 57 instead of 56. The MT mentions only six Vināyakas in this enclosure.
36. SkP states: the five Vināyakas beginning with Moda. The names of no. 49 to 53 are given according to the MT. The Tristhalīsetu reads: Moda, Pramoda, Āmoda, Sumukha, and Durmukha.

Gaṇavara(pura) was Śaṃkara's halting-place between Subrahmaṇyakṣetra and Tulajābhavānīpura near Kuvalayāpura (today: Kolhapur). Contrary to this, the Śaṃkaravijayavilāsa 28.1 specifies the town as Vakratuṇḍapurī near the river Gandhavatī, Śaṃkara's halting-place between Rāmeśvara and Madurai.

The first three Gaṇapatis are well known. A mantra of Navanīta-Gaṇapati from the pūrvāmnāya occurs in the Śrīvidyāratnākara, p. 380, 24-25: oṃ glauṃ navanītagaṇapataye sarvajanān me vaśam ānaya svāhā. Iconographically, this deity may represent a parallel to Navanītanṛtta-Kṛṣṇa, "Kṛṣṇa dancing with a ball of butter." A six-armed Suvarṇa-Gaṇapati is described in CHANDRA 1972, p. 136. Saṃtāna-Gaṇapati reminds one of Saṃtāna-Gopāla, a form of Kṛṣṇa worshipped to obtain offspring.

Among the Tantric texts dealing with Gaṇeśa, the Vidyārṇavatantra is of special importance as it mentions a great number of forms of this deity. So far the material compiled in this extensive work has been analysed only by ŚĀSTRĪ (in a pamphlet, 1944). This author attempted a brief summary of the iconographic description of the forms of Gaṇapati in the VT on pp. 36-39, which is, however, incomplete as several forms are entirely missing. The analysis of dhyāna verses in general requires a careful study, familiarity with the synonyms of terms for attributes, and the study of parallel descriptions. Similarly, the analysis of the forms of Gaṇapati occurring in the Tantrasāra by SIRCAR 1972-73, pp. 202-04, could be improved upon, and the analysis of the same material by PAL 1981, pp. 125-29, contains many inaccuracies.

The Gaṇapatis described in the VT do not form a group like the 16 or 32 forms popular in South India or the 56 Vināyakas of Kāśī. They are the forms which the compiler of the VT considered most important. We do not know to what extent they were actually worshipped by Tantrics according to the prescribed procedures. But the popularity of the VT among Tantric worshippers and the great number of other texts in which the same forms occur testify to the importance of the forms of Gaṇapati described in this text.

In the introductory remarks and in the colophon, the VT is ascribed to one Vidyāraṇya Yati, who is said to have been a disciple of Pragalbhācārya, who was a disciple of Viṣṇuśarman, who on his part was Śaṃkara's disciple (cf. VT 1, ch. 1, verses 71 ff.). He is connected with Vidyāraṇya Yati, the founder of Vijayānagara. The work is said to have been written on the request of Ambadeva, the son of Prauḍhadeva and king of Vidyānagara (v. 93 f.).

The identity of this Vidyāraṇya Yati is doubtful.[38] A number of comparatively late texts like the Jñānārṇavatantra and Kulārṇavatantra are frequently quoted. In any case, the text must have been compiled before CE 1726, which is the date of a manuscript quoted in ŚĀSTRĪ 1944, p. 3. The author occasionally quotes equivalents of names of trees and substances in the language of Madhyadeśa[39] and the town Kānyakubja[40] (= Kanauj) while synonyms in the Kannaḍa language are absent, and he refers to the Vindhya[41] region and Kashmir[42]. One can therefore assume with ŚĀSTRĪ 1944, pp. 3-4, that he was from North India.

The text,[43] which consists mostly of quotations in verse form and the compiler's prose remarks, which explain difficult words, discuss varying opinions, and describe the ritual applications (prayoga) of the mantras, has been edited from a number of manuscripts by R.C. KAK and H. SHASTRI, Srinagar 1932-37. Chapters (śvāsa) 1-18 (= vol. 1, pp. 1-545 of the edition) form the pūrvārdha, chapters 19-36 (= vol. 2, pp. 1-914 of the edition) the uttarabhāga. The initial chapters of this edition (without the prose text and the footnotes giving the v.l.) have been reprinted by Kalyan Mandir Publications, Prayāg 1966-67. The text contains many misprints. The pūrvārdha without the v.l. of the Srinagar edition has been reprinted in the recent "edition" by R.K. Rai, Varanasi 1976. Although this edition is named Vidyārṇavatantra, one should be aware that it consists only of the first half of the text.

Almost the entire 32nd chapter (= vol. 2, pp. 668-715) of the VT deals with the different forms of Gaṇapati. Among the texts frequently quoted are the Sārasaṃgraha, Prapañcasāra, Śāradātilakatantra, Prayogasāra, Tantrasārasaṃgraha (quoted as "Nārāyaṇīya"), the lost Gaṇeśvaraparāmarśiṇī, and the Yantrasāra from Kerala. Of these texts, the identity of the Sārasaṃgraha, the most important source of this chapter of the VT, is not clear. The text is not identical to the Prapañcasārasārasaṃgraha (= PSSS) of Gīrvāṇendra Sarasvatī, Saubhāgyasiddha Nityānanda's still unedited commentary Sārasaṃgraha[44] on the Prapañcasāra, Sakalāgamasārasaṃgraha, or, as Śāstrī, 1944, p. 9, assumes, Ānandatīrthabhagavatpādācārya's Tantrasārasaṃgraha. The catalogue of manuscripts in the Bhārata-Itihāsa-Saṃśodhaka-Maṇḍala, Pune (ed. G.H. Khare, Pune 1960) lists a manuscript under entry no. 46, 54k bearing the title Sārasaṃgraha, which can no longer be traced in the collection. Kaviraj 1972, p. 693, refers to a manuscript of the same title by Akulendranātha preserved in the Asiatic Society of Bengal (no. 6620). The description in the catalogue of manuscripts shows that the manuscript is incomplete and does not contain a section on Gaṇeśa. The quotes from the Prayogasāra occurring in the VT can be traced to chapter 20, entitled vighneśvarapūjā, of this still unedited[45] work by Govinda of Kerala; the quotes from the unedited Yantrasāra can be traced to a manuscript of the same title.[46]

The following forms of Gaṇeśa are described in the VT:

1. Ekākṣara-Gaṇapati
2. Viri-G. (3 mantras)
3. Lakṣmī-G.
4. Śakti-G. I (2 mantras)

45. I checked a transcript of the 20th chapter of manuscript no. 2780 preserved in the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, Madras (Chennai) (cf. Triennial Catalogue of Manuscripts Collected during the Triennium 1916-17 to 1918-19, Government Oriental Manuscripts Library, Madras, by S. Kuppuswami Sastri, vol. III, pt. I - Sanskrit C. Madras 1922, pp. 3988-90).

46. I checked a transcript of a palm leaf manuscript from Kerala preserved in the Manuscripts Library, Trivandrum (Thiruvananthapuram) (cf. Alphabetical Index of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Oriental Research Institute and Manuscripts Library, Trivandrum, vol. 3, Trivandrum 1984: Yantrasāra no. 447a/280 and 447b/281).

The majority of these forms, viz. nos. 1, 2, 5, 7-9, 11, and 14e are red; nos. 3, 4, 12, 13, and 14a-d are golden/yellow; no. 10 is the colour of pearls, and no. 6 has five heads, each a different colour. Some forms are specified as sitting on a lotus (nos. 1, 3, 8, 9, 13, and 14); only one (no. 6) sits on a lion. Gaṇeśa's common vehicle, rat/mouse, is not mentioned at all. Many forms are specified as bearing a digit of the moon on the crest (nos. 1, 2a-b, and 5-11); this is the sixteenth lunar digit (indukalā) containing nectar and symbolizing the deity's divine power. Many forms have three eyes (nos. 1-3, 4b, 5, and 8-14e) signifying the sun, moon, and — the third eye — fire[47]; this is also the eye of knowledge.

Nos. 2, 3, 4b, 8-11, and 14h are accompanied by a consort (śakti). Of these, nos. 2, 10, and 11 describe the deity as touching his consort's sex-organ with his trunk or one of his hands and the consort as holding the deity's phallic symbol (liṅga). Such forms are also represented in art; generally one finds them classified as Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati[48], which is too general a term. No. 14h describes the deity as having sexual intercourse with his consort. Statues of Gaṇeśa accompanied by a consort are frequently found in South Indian art, usually having 10 arms. From North India several four-armed specimens with śakti are known, the oldest dating from the 6th century CE.[49]

The forms described in the VT usually have four arms, except for nos. 2c, 6, 8, and 9, which have ten arms, and no. 12, which has six arms. The attributes are held not only in the hands but also in the elephant's trunk. The attributes described by the text are:

arrow (śara, bāṇa, viśikha); usually combined with the bow held in the opposite hand. Both attributes belong to the insignia of royalty.

axe (paraśu, ṭaṅka); a weapon of destruction. Originally, the paraśu had the shape of a real axe, but later the blade became disproportionally small, and it was considered equivalent to a ṭaṅka, a stone-cutter's chisel (LIEBERT 1976, p. 213).

For other four-armed Gaṇeśas with śakti, cf. JOŚI 1979, plates 140-41, pp. 275-76, GETTY 1936, plate 4a, and LAL 1965, plate 156.

bow (of sugarcane) ([ikṣu]kārmuka, dhanus, cāpa); a symbol of royalty and generally combined with the arrow held in the opposite hand.

citron: fruit of the c. tree (bījapūra, bījāpūra, mātuluṅga; citrus limonum Risso, citrus medica Linn.); an attribute also held by Gaṇeśa's father Śiva. With its countless seeds, it symbolizes the creative power (kriyāśaktī) (MITRA 1933, p. 197).

cock (kukkuṭa); usually it is held by Skanda. It occurs here only with Subrahmaṇya-Gaṇapati.

conch (śaṃkha, abja); either a weapon or a wind-instrument.

discus (cakra); a symbol of the sun, of power, usually associated with Viṣṇu.

goad: elephant's g. (aṅkuśa, sṛṇi); a weapon which consists of a metal hook fixed to a wooden handle. It is often connected with the noose held in the opposite hand.

lotus (padma, abja, utpala); an important symbol, especially of creation; the red lotus is associated with the sun, the blue lotus with the moon.

mace (gadā, mudgara); an emblem of destruction (LIEBERT 1976, p. 86), a symbol of strength and power.

modaka, a sweetmeat of a particular shape.

noose (pāśa, guṇa); a weapon to bind enemies. It is connected with the elephant's goad held in the opposite hand.

rice shoot: tip of the r. s. (vrīhyagra, śālimañjarī); a symbol of agricultural fertility.

rosary ([akṣa]mālā, japavaṭī); the beads of the rosary, which usually is an attribute of Sarasvatī or of Brahmā but is also held by Śiva, represent the letters of the alphabet from a to kṣa.

skull (kapāla); a vessel from which terrifying deities drink blood; an attribute of many forms of Śiva; occurs also as: skull filled with liquor (madhumatkapāla); this attribute is held by Viri-Gaṇapati and may indicate practices of the left-hand path of Tantrism.

spear (śakti); a warrior emblem (LIEBERT 1976, p. 246), usually an attribute held by Skanda. Here it occurs with Subrahmaṇya-Gaṇapati.

sugarcane: stem of s. (ikṣudaṇḍa); a symbol of agricultural fertility; see also: bow (of sugarcane).

trident ([tri]śūla, triśikha, rujā); a weapon against enemies and evil.

tusk: elephant's t. (danta, rada); this is Gaṇeśa's own broken tusk which, according to mythology, he lost in a fight. When writing the Mahābhārata, he used it as a stylus.

vessel (of jewels) ([ratna]kalaśa, kumbha); usually an attribute of Kubera indicating wealth; several forms of Gaṇeśa hold it in the trunk/hand.

wish-granting creeper (kalpalatā); a fabulous creeper supposed to grant all wishes of its owner; this attribute is held by Kṣipraprasādana-Gaṇapati.

Gestures of the Hands:

anger, gesture of (krodha-mudrā); identified in VT 2, p. 702, 1, with the (clenched) fist (muṣṭi), which is a symbol of strength; here it is shown by Haridrā-Gaṇapati and seems to have some connection with the ritual act of immobilization (stambhana).

protection: gesture of p. (abhaya, bhītihara); symbolizes the protection granted to the worshipper.

wish-granting gesture (varada, vara, dāna, iṣṭida); shows the deity's ability to fulfil the devotee's desires.

Forms of Gaṇapati according to the VT

The following chart gives the attributes of the forms of Gaṇeśa. Here and elsewhere, the attributes held in the hands have been listed beginning with the upper hands:

For one form of Gaṇapati (e.g. no. 2, Viri-G.) different *mantra*s and corresponding iconographic descriptions may exist (e.g. *mantra*s 2a and 2b - dhyāna 1, mantra 2c - dhyāna 2); sometimes the iconographic descriptions of two forms of Gaṇapati agree (cf. Ucchiṣṭa-G. 14a-d and Vakratuṇḍa-G.; Trailokyamohana-G. and Mahā-G.).

List of Mantras of the Forms of Gaṇapati occurring in the VT

The mantras are usually described in code language to guard their secrecy. E.g. the mantra gaṃ of Ekākṣara-Gaṇapati is given in the text as: śārṅgin ("archer", i.e. the syllable ga) and prīti ("happiness", i.e. the anusvāra). This code has been partly solved by the compiler in his prose commentary. Doubts could be removed by the study of texts dealing with the same subject matter and by using special dictionaries (cf. the dictionaries ed. by BHATTACHARYA in Tantrābhidhāna).

The following list gives all *mantra*s of the forms of Gaṇapati occurring in the VT.

1. Ekākṣara-Gaṇapati:

   gaṃ (or: gaḥ, gaṃ, gaṃḥ, gauṃ, ga, glauṃ, goṃ)

2. Viri-Gaṇapati:

   a) hrīṃ viri viri gaṇapati varavarada sarvalokaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

   b) hrīṃ viri viri gaṇapati sarvaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

   c) gaṃ glauṃ klīṃ hrīṃ śrīṃ oṃ hrīṃ viri viri gaṇapati varavarada sarvalokaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

3. Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati:

   śrīṃ gaṃ saumyāya mahāgaṇapataye varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

4. Śakti-Gaṇapati I:

   a) hrīṃ grīṃ hrīṃ

   b) oṃ hrīṃ grīṃ hrīṃ

5. Kṣipraprasādana-Gaṇapati:

   gaṃ kṣipraprasādanāya namaḥ

6. Heramba:

   oṃ gūṃ namaḥ

7. Subrahmaṇya-Gaṇapati:

   a) oṃ bacatbhuve namaḥ

   b) oṃ bacatbhuve namaḥ oṃ

   c) oṃ hrīṃ bacatbhuve namaḥ

8. Mahā-Gaṇapati:

   oṃ śrīṃ hrīṃ klīṃ glauṃ gaṃ gaṇapataye varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

9. Trailokyamohana-Gaṇapati:

   vakratuṇḍaikadaṃṣṭrāya klīṃ hrīṃ śrīṃ gaṃ gaṇapate varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

10. Śakti-Gaṇapati II:

    hrīṃ gaṃ hrīṃ mahāgaṇapataye svāhā

11. Bhogalola-Gaṇapati:

    oṃ hrīṃ gaṃ hrīṃ vaśam ānaya svāhā

12. Haridrā-Gaṇapati:

    oṃ hūṃ (or: huṃ) gaṃ glauṃ haridrāgaṇapataye varavarada sarvajanahṛdayaṃ stambhaya stambhaya svāhā

13. Vakratuṇḍa-Gaṇapati:

    a) vakratuṇḍāya huṃ (or: hūṃ)

    b) megholkāya svāhā

    c) rāyaspoṣasya dayitā nidhido ratnado vadaṃ ।
    rakṣohaṇo vo valagahano vakratuṇḍāya hūṃ ॥

    d) tatpuruṣāya vidmahe vakratuṇḍāya dhīmahi ।
    tan no dantī pracodayāt ॥

14. Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati:

    a) hastipiśācilikhe svāhā

    b) oṃ krīṃ krīṃ hrīṃ hrīṃ huṃ ghe ghe phaṭ svāhā

    c) ekadaṃṣṭrāya hastimukhalambodarāya ucchiṣṭātmane kroṃ glūṃ hrīṃ huṃ ghe ghe svāhā

    d) oṃ namo bhagavate ekadaṃṣṭrāya hastimukhalambodarāya ucchiṣṭamahātmane kroṃ glūṃ hrīṃ huṃ ghe ghe svāhā

    e) oṃ gaṃ haṃ klauṃ glauṃ ucchiṣṭagaṇeśāya mahāyakṣāyāyaṃ baliḥ

    f) oṃ hrīṃ gaṃ hastipiśācilikhe svāhā

    g) oṃ namaḥ ucchiṣṭagaṇeśāya hastipiśācilikhe svāhā

    h) oṃ namo bhagavate ekadaṃṣṭrāya hastimukhāya lambodarāya ucchiṣṭamahātmane āṃ kroṃ hrīṃ gaṃ ghe ghe svāhā

    i) oṃ hastimukhāya lambodarāya ucchiṣṭamahātmane āṃ kroṃ hrīṃ klīṃ hrīṃ huṃ ghe ghe ucchiṣṭāya svāhā

For each mantra the seer (ṛṣi), who has visualized the mantra, and the metre (chandas), which does not indicate a metrical unit but an inner rhythm, are given. The majority of mantras are ascribed to the seer Gaṇaka (viz. nos. 1, 2, 5, 6, 8-11, and 14h). Other names of seers are Antaryāmin (no. 3), Śukra (Bhārgava) (nos. 4 and 13), Agni (no. 7), Madana (no. 12), and Kaṅkola (nos. 14a-e). The metre is mostly (nicṛd-)gāyatrī[53] (nos. 1-3, 4b, 6-11, and 14h); virāj (nos. 4a, 5, and 14a-e) and anuṣṭubh (nos. 12 and 13) also occur.

Each form of Gaṇapati is surrounded by groups of deities (āvaraṇa); usually there are six groups (nos. 1-3 and 8-14d), or five (nos. 4b, 5, 7, and 14e), rarely three (no. 6) or four (no. 4a). All the āvaraṇa deities occupy specific positions in the yantras. Some forms of Gaṇapati have the same yantra and group of surrounding deities (e.g. Viri-G. = Mahā-G.). Three basic patterns of yantras occur:

1. an eight-petalled (aṣṭadala) lotus surrounded by three bhūpuras, i.e. squares the four lines of which are interrupted by T-shaped entrances; in between the three bhūpuras are two vīthis, i.e. passages surrounding the bhūpuras, meant for circumambulation;
2. a triangle (trikoṇa) representing the pericarp (karṇikā) of the lotus, surrounded by a hexagon (ṣaṭkoṇa) representing the filaments (kesara) of the lotus, both inside an eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three bhūpuras and two vīthis (cf. 1.); and
3. an eight-petalled lotus surrounded by a second eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three bhūpuras and two vīthis (cf. 1.).

The outer part (= the three bhūpuras and two vīthis) is common to all yantras in this section. Type 1 is common to eight forms of Gaṇapati, type 2 is represented five times, and type 3 occurs three times.

According to a general practice reflected in the texts (cf. e.g. ŚT 13.49) as well as the current practice of worshippers of Gaṇeśa, the directions in the pūjā of Gaṇeśa are assigned to a yantra in a different way:

Directions in the gaṇeśapūjā			Directions in the pūjā of Śrī
SW	W	NW	NE	E	SE
S		N	N		S
SE	E	NE	NW	W	SW

53. The term refers to a gāyatrī (regular: 3 × 8 syllables) which is short one syllable, e.g. the Sāvitrī-Gāyatrī which is short one syllable in its first part.

By turning the plan of directions for Śrī 180°, one obtains the plan of directions for Gaṇeśa. This fact should be kept in mind when looking at the yantras given in the appendix.

Among the deities of the enclosures usually figure the śaktis of Gaṇeśa's six limbs (ṣaḍaṅga), the group of eight mother goddesses (mātṛkā)[54], and the ten guardians of the directions (dikpāla) and their attributes (āyudha). These are assigned to the following directions:

Six śaktis of Gaṇeśa's limbs

1.	śakti of the heart (hṛdaya-śakti)	— SE
2.	śakti of the head (śiraḥ-śakti)	— NE
3.	śakti of the tuft of the hair (śikhā-śakti)	— SW
4.	śakti of the armour (kavaca-śakti)	— NW
5.	śakti of the three eyes (netratraya-śakti)	— centre
6.	śakti of the weapon (astra-śakti)	— in the four cardinal directions, beginning "in front of the deity" (= E)

Eight mother goddesses

1.	Brāhmī	— E
2.	Māheśī/Māheśvarī	— SE
3.	Kaumārī	— S
4.	Vaiṣṇavī	— SW
5.	Vārāhī	— W
6.	Indrāṇī	— NW
7.	Cāmuṇḍā	— N
8.	Mahālakṣmī	— NE

54. The first seven names form the well-known group of seven mother goddesses (saptamātṛkā). In sculpture this group is often accompanied by Gaṇeśa. The group of eight mother goddesses is common in Tantric texts where an even number of deities is to be assigned to specific parts of a yantra as āvaraṇa deities.

Ten guardians of the directions and their attributes

1.	Indra – thunderbolt (vajra)	— E
2.	Agni – spear (śakti)	— SE
3.	Yama – staff (daṇḍa)	— S
4.	Nirṛti – sword (khaḍga)	— SW
5.	Varuṇa – noose (pāśa)	— W
6.	Vāyu – goad (aṅkuśa)	— NW
7.	Soma/Kubera – mace (gadā)	— N
8.	Īśāna – trident (triśūla)	— NE
9.	Ananta – discus (cakra)	— "below", shown in the yantra figure between SW[55] and W
10.	Brahmā – lotus (padma)	— "above", shown in the yantra figure between E and NE[56]

Special groups of deities related to Gaṇeśa:

Five pairs of deities (mithunadevatā)

1.	Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī	— E
2.	Gaurīpati and Gaurī	— S
3.	Ratipati and Rati	— W
4.	Kola and Mahī	— N
5.	Gaṇanāyaka and Lakṣmī	— "in front of Gaṇapati" (cf. nos. 2 and 8-11.)[57]

55. The south-western direction is associated with the nether world; for this reason Ananta, the snake, is placed nearby.

56. The north-eastern direction is connected with men and gods and is regarded as the gate of heaven (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa 6.6.2.3-4). Brahmā is therefore placed nearby.

Six Gaṇapatis and two Nidhis with their consorts

1.	Āmoda and Siddhi	— E
2.	Pramoda and Samṛddhi	— SE
3.	Sumukha and Kānti	— NE
4.	Durmukha and Madanāvatī	— W
5.	Vighna and Madadravā	— SW
6.	Vighnakartṛ and Drāviṇī	— NW
7.	Śaṅkhanidhi and Vasudhārā	— S
8.	Padmanidhi and Vasumatī (cf. nos. 2 and 8-11.)[57]	— N

Eight forms of Gaṇapati

1.	Vakratuṇḍa	— E
2.	Ekadaṃṣṭra	— SE
3.	Mahodara	— S
4.	Gajānana	— SW
5.	Lambodara	— W
6.	Vikaṭa	— NW
7.	Vighnarāja	— N
8.	Dhūmravarṇaka (cf. nos. 1, 3, 4b, 12-13 and 14a-d.)[57]	— NE

When Gaṇapati is worshipped in the Tantric pūjā[58], the worship begins with meditation (dhyāna) on the deity's form, mental worship (mānasa-pūjā), and nyāsa rites. Then the nine śaktis of Gaṇeśa's pedestal (pīṭhaśakti), who are common to every Tantric pūjā of Gaṇeśa, are worshipped.[59] Their names are:

1. Tīvrā
2. Jvālinī

57. These numbers refer to different forms of Gaṇeśa discussed in the main section of this study.

58. For the Tantric pūjā of Gaṇeśa according to the Nityotsava, cf. BÜHNEMANN 1988a (2003).

59. Cf. PS 17.22-23, quoted in VT 2, p. 669, 3-6.

3. Nandā
4. Bhogadā
5. Kāmarūpiṇī
6. Ugrā
7. Tejovatī
8. Satyā
9. Vighnanāśinī

Gaṇeśa is then invoked in the yantra and worshipped along with the surrounding deities.

The VT gives details of the procedure called "preliminary ritual" (puraścaraṇa) for making the *mantra*s effective (siddha). It consists of:

1. the repetition of the mantra (japa), usually 100,000 (= 1 lakh) times; in the present kali era the given number is to be multiplied by four;
2. the fire sacrifice (homa); the number of offerings is 1/10 the number of repetitions of the mantra; here it is often performed with eight materials (aṣṭadravya) believed to be liked by Gaṇapati:

   *modaka*s (sweetmeats of a particular shape), parched and flattened rice (pṛthuka), parched grains (lājāḥ, pl.),
   flour of barley (saktu),
   sugarcane pieces,
   coconuts,
   sesame seeds, and
   bananas;

   or with the three sweet substances:

   ghee, honey, and sugar, or:
   ghee, honey, and milk;[60]
3. the offering of water libations (tarpaṇa); the number of offerings is 1/10 the number of offerings in the fire; and

60. According to VT 2, p. 683, 30-31; according to Rāghavabhaṭṭa's commentary on ŚT, p. 329, 18: milk, honey, and sugar, and Vīramitrodaya: Pūjāprakāśa, p. 161, 4 (quoting Viṣṇudharmottara): honey, sugarcane juice, and milk.

4. the feeding of Brahmins (brāhmaṇabhojana)[61]/of young girls before puberty (kumārībhojana)/of life-long religious students (brahmacāribhojana)[62]; they are fed in place of certain deities; the number of persons fed is 1/10 the number of water libations.

When the mantra has become effective, which is indicated by certain signs, it can be employed in special rituals to achieve the fulfilment of particular wishes (kāmya-karman).

For each form of Gaṇapati the text gives some details for the performance of fire sacrifices for achieving special aims (kāmyahoma). Here particular materials are offered in the fire to achieve particular aims, e.g. coconuts for wealth and balls of salt smeared with curds for bringing someone under one's control. Usually the offerings are fixed in number and are to be made on certain lunar days of the month.

Apart from the fire sacrifices (homa), the text often describes non-homa rites. These rites for most part fall under the category of black magic (abhicāra). The acts of abhicāra are: attraction (ākarṣaṇa), subjugation (vaśīkaraṇa), immobilization (stambhana), eradication (uccāṭana), liquidation (māraṇa), and delusion (mohana). Frequently idols of Gaṇeśa made from the root of the white Arka tree or from the wood of a Nimba tree broken by an elephant or from potter's clay mixed with other substances are mentioned. These idols as well as other objects: dolls, bones or mixtures of substances are charged with a certain number of repetitions of the respective mantra and may be eaten, applied to parts of the body, offered to a person or buried in a place to achieve certain purposes. Apart from the regular yantras of the forms of Gaṇapati, special yantras are occasionally prescribed in connection with the abhicāra rites. A general idea of the ritual practices connected with abhicāra can be gained from GOUDRIAAN 1978, especially pp. 251-412. This study also deals with the symbolism of colours and materials.

For reasons of space, the ritual descriptions occurring in the VT have not been compared with other sources, whereas I have compared the

61. brāhmaṇabhojana is explicitly prescribed in the puraścaraṇa of the mantras of Mahā-G., Śakti-G. II, Vakratuṇḍa-G., and Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati (14h).

62. The feeding of kumārīs and brahmacārins is prescribed for the puraścaraṇa of the mantra of Haridrā-Gaṇapati. For the definition of brahmacārin, cf. VT 2, p. 702, 11.

*mantra*s, iconographic descriptions, and *yantra*s with mainly the following texts in the section entitled "other sources":

Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati (= ĪŚP) by Īśānaśivagurudevamiśra, a Śaiva manual of temple worship; pūrvārdha (= 1), chapters 16-17;

Tantrasāra (= TS)[63] by Kṛṣṇānanda, 17th cent. CE; chapter 2; follows mainly the ŚT, which it quotes as "Nibandha";

Tantrasārasaṃgraha (= TSS) by Nārāyaṇa from Kerala, 15th-16th cent. CE; chapter 24;

Nārada Purāṇa (= NP); chapter 68;

Prapañcasāra (= PS), an anonymous digest on mantraśāstra traditionally ascribed to Śaṃkara; composed "much after the beginning of the thirteenth century"[64]; chapter 17[65]; this early text describes only three forms of Gaṇapati;

Prapañcasārasārasaṃgraha (= PSSS) by Gīrvāṇendra Sarasvatī[66]; follows PS; chapter 16;

Prāṇatoṣiṇī (= PrT) by Rāmatoṣaṇa Vidyālaṃkāra, composed in CE 1820; kāṇḍa 5, prakaraṇa 1 (= pp. 591-614);

Mantramahārṇava (= MM) by Mādhavarāya Vaidya, written after CE 1871, the date of Harikṛṣṇa's Bhadramārtaṇḍa, and before 1907, the date of the first printed edition from Bombay; follows MMD; pūrvakhaṇḍa (= 1), chapter 5 (= pp. 58-90);

Mantramahodadhi (= MMD) by Mahīdhara, composed CE 1588-89; chapter 2;

Merutantra (= MT); chapters 16-20; and Śāradātilakatantra (= ŚT) by Lakṣmaṇadeśika; chapter 13; with the commentary Padārthādarśa by Rāghavabhaṭṭa, written CE 1494; this text is based on the PS but rearranges and presents its subject matter in a clearer language.

63. The Bengali edition of this work, which partly differs, is referred to as Bṛhattantrasāra.

64. According to SANDERSON 2007, p. 233.

65. = chapter 16 in the edition which forms part of the complete works of Śaṃkara. For a translation of this chapter, cf. BÜHNEMANN 1987a.

66. Nothing is known about the author except that he was a pupil of Viśveśvara Sarasvatī, who was a disciple of Amarendra Sarasvatī.

The following three texts have been excluded, as they are only compilations of the above-listed sources:

Puraścaryārṇava, compiled by Pratāp Siṃha Sāh Dev, king of Nepal (ruled from CE 1774-76/77); chapter 8;

Śāktapramoda by (?) Rājā Devānanda Siṃha of Muzaffarpur (printed for the first time in CE 1890); chapter 15 entitled Gaṇeśa-Tantra; and Sahasramantrasārasaṃgraha, recently compiled by C.V.S. IYER; pt. 1, pp. 33-39; 270-72; pt. 2, pp. 101-21.

I have further utilized the following texts which provide iconographic descriptions of the forms of Gaṇapati without reference to *mantra*s and ritual applications:

Ajitāgama, vol. 3, chapter 55 entitled ṣoḍaśagaṇapatisthāpanavidhi; this section is preserved only in a few manuscripts of the Ajitāgama and may not form part of the original work;

Kriyākramadyoti (= KKD) by Aghoraśiva, 12th cent. CE; text as quoted by RAO 1914-16, vol. 1, appendix C, pp. 7-12;

Devatāmūrtiprakaraṇa (= DMP) and Rūpamaṇḍana (= RM), two works on sculpture by Sūtradhāra Maṇḍana; based on South Indian texts; uses the ŚR; chapter 8 of DMP and chapter 5 of RM;

Mūrtidhyāna, a South Indian compilation of unknown date, describes sixteen Gaṇapatis (= no. 1, (1) - (16));

Rūpamaṇḍana (= RM) → Devatāmūrtiprakaraṇa;

Śilparatna (= ŚR) by Śrīkumāra from Kerala, 16th century CE; pt. 2, chapter 25; and Śrītattvanidhi (= ŚTN), compiled by Kṛṣṇarāja Wodeyar IV, king of Mysore, who ascended the throne in CE 1895; Śivatattva (= pt. 3), nos. 70-101; describes 32 forms of Gaṇeśa according to the Mudgala Purāṇa (description not contained in the printed edition of the Purāṇa); many verses agree literally with those found in the KKD.

(VT 2, pp. 668, 4 - 672, 23; VT 1, p. 259, 11-22)

Mantra: gaṃ

TSS 24.32 is quoted for five types of seed (bīja) syllables of Gaṇapati: gaḥ (1), gaṃ (2), gaṃḥ (3) (i.e. a nasalization of the phonem 'a' plus visarga), gauṃ (4), and ga (5). Quoting Sārasaṃgraha, the syllables glauṃ (6) and goṃ (7) are also given.

According to some (cf. PS, PSSS), the mantra begins with the syllable oṃ (i.e. oṃ gaṃ). In the case of a pūjā, it ends in namaḥ (i.e. [oṃ] gaṃ namaḥ), in the case of a fire sacrifice, it ends in svāhā (i.e. [oṃ] gaṃ svāhā) (cf. also PS, ŚT).

The name of this form of Gaṇapati is derived from his one-syllabled mantra, which is also his seed (bīja) syllable. According to a common Tantric practice, the seed syllable of a deity is formed by taking the first syllable of the name (here: Gaṇeśa/Gaṇapati) and adding the anusvāra (cf. similarly duṃ derived from Durgā).

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 100,000

homa - with the eight materials[8]

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	Day	Result
milk rice smeared with ghee		desired object coconuts	4th lunar day	wealth
barley flour, coconuts, sesame seeds, and parched grains for 400 times	1st to 4th day of the bright half	subjugation sesame seeds mixed with rice grains		prosperity, subjugation, fame parched grains smeared with the three sweet substances[9]	seven days	bride/bridegroom
balls of salt smeared with curds	four nights	subjugation

Other rites:

1. Prepare an idol of Gaṇeśa from either the root of the white Arka tree, red sandalwood, from the wood of a Nimba tree broken by an elephant, or ivory; charge it with repetitions of the mantra and put it in the top-knot (śikhā) on the day of a lunar eclipse to be victorious in business and battle.
2. Charge yellow pigment (rocanā) mixed with the ichor of an elephant with repetitions of the mantra; apply a mark (tilaka) of it on the forehead to subjugate someone.
3. Write the victim's name beginning and ending with the seed syllables of Gaṇeśa in clockwise and reverse order in fresh butter;

8. For the eight materials to be offered to Gaṇeśa, cf. p. 31.
9. For the three sweet substances, cf. p. 31.

infuse the butter with life and charge it with 108 repetitions of the mantra. Eat the butter silently. This subjugates the victim after seven days.

4. Offer water libations to Gaṇeśa to obtain the desired object in 49 days.

Other sources: The mantra, dhyāna, and yantra of this form of Gaṇapati occur in a large number of texts, like PS 17.47-63; PSSS, p. 459, 1 - 461, 15; ŚT 13.2-27; ĪŚP 1.16.34-49; TS, p. 108, 13 - 109, 18; TSS 24.32-42; MT 16.10-54cd; and PrT (quoting ŚT), p. 607, 24 ff. MT 16.10-11 lists different seed syllables which are said to be employed by different groups of people: vaidikas — ga; dakṣiṇāmnāya — gaṃ; pūrvāmnāya — gaḥ; ūrdhvāmnāya — gauṃ; uttarāmnāya — glauṃ; pātālāmnāya — gauṃ (same as ūrdhvāmnāya!). MMD 2.134 and MM, p. 70, 16-17, mention also glaṃ. The mantra gaṃ (and oṃ gaṃ) is taught in the Gaṇeśātharvaśīrṣa Upaniṣad, section 7. ŚTN 3.86 (quoting PS) mentions this Gaṇapati as one of the 32 forms.[10] ĪŚP 1.16.34 ff. quotes the mantra gaṃ/gauṃ. Its metre is said to be virāj. According to this text and TSS 24.35, two of Gaṇeśa's attributes differ: instead of showing the wish-granting gesture he holds eatables, probably sweets;[11] in his trunk he carries a vessel (filled with jewels) instead of the fruit of the citron tree. The Gaṇeśātharvaśīrṣa Upaniṣad, section 9, mentions the attributes as given by the VT but does not say anything about the attribute held in the trunk. MT 16.16cd-18 mentions only the attributes noose and goad.

PSSS, p. 469,2, names this form of Gaṇapati "Bīja-Gaṇapati," probably because it owes its name to the seed (bīja) mantra. Similarly ŚR 2.25.52, but this text lists several other forms under this name.

10. For these 32 forms, cf. pp. 4 ff.

11. Cf. Rāghavabhaṭṭa on ŚT, p. 329,19: bhakṣyaṃ laḍḍukādi.

SECTION 2

Viri-Gaṇapati

The Gaṇapati who[se mantra] is connected with the word viri
(VT 2, pp. 672, 23 - 674, 4; VT 1, p. 261, 6-11)

2a.

Mantra: 26 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha)

hrīṃ viri viri gaṇapati[1] varavarada sarvalokaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Hrīṃ viri viri O[1] Gaṇapati, O best boon-giver, bring the entire universe under my control, svāhā."

This form of Gaṇapati owes its name to the word viri, which occurs in the mantra twice; its meaning is obscure. This form has no connection with the Vīra-Gaṇapati included among the 32 forms of Gaṇeśa.[2] The wording of the second part of the mantra (varavarada . . .) resembles the wording of the mantra of Mahā-Gaṇapati (cf. section 8).

1. One would expect here the vocative gaṇapate. The VT mentions clearly °pati; MT reads °pate; the reading of the ŚT is not clear, both forms are possible.

2. For the 32 forms cf. pp. 4 ff.

of this Gaṇapati are the skull filled with liquor, held as one of the attributes, and his touching his consort's sex-organ, which show the influence of the left-hand path of Tantrism.

2b.

Mantra: 19 syllables (according to "some" authorities including the Gaṇeśvaraparāmarśinī); this mantra is a variant of 2a, which omits the words varavarada and loka.

hrīṃ viri viri gaṇapati[1] sarvaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Hrīṃ viri viri O[1] Gaṇapati, bring everything under my control, svāhā."

Seer, metre, and meditation as 2a.

2c.

Mantra: 32 syllables (according to "others"); this is a variant of 2a. The six seed syllables of the mantra of Mahā-Gaṇapati (cf. section 8): oṃ śrīṃ hrīṃ klīṃ glauṃ gaṃ have been prefixed to the mantra in reverse order.

gaṃ glauṃ klīṃ hrīṃ śrīṃ oṃ hrīṃ viri viri gaṇapati[1] varavarada sarvalokaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Gaṃ glauṃ klīṃ hrīṃ śrīṃ oṃ hrīṃ viri viri O[1] Gaṇapati, O best boon-giver, bring the entire universe under my control, svāhā."

Seer and metre as 2a.

Meditation: The form to be meditated upon differs from 2a and 2b. This form is similar to Mahā-Gaṇapati (section 8), whose six seed syllables have been prefixed to the mantra.

trunk: touching Puṣṭi's sex-organ is red, has three eyes; his consort Puṣṭi holds a lotus in one hand and touches Gaṇapati's liṅga with the other.

The attributes R 1, 2, 4, 5, and L 2-5 of this form are held in common with Mahā-Gaṇapati. A special feature of this form is that he touches Puṣṭi's sex-organ with his trunk (and not with his right hand as in 2a). This characteristic is shared with Bhogalola-Gaṇapati (cf. section 11) and with Heramba (cf. section 6, according to one description I have found in Anantānandagiri's Śaṃkaravijaya[3]).

2a-c.

Yantra: like Mahā-Gaṇapati (section 8)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 400,000

homa - with the eight materials smeared with the three sweet substances

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	Result
lotus flowers	subjugation
sesame seeds and rice grains	prosperity
*modaka*s smeared with ghee	victory

food of all kinds	desired object

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati is not mentioned in the PS, but it occurs in the ŚT 13.67-78ab (*mantra*s 2b and 2c are also referred to in Rāghava's commentary). Rāghava, p. 328, 25, states that some authorities employ the word °janaṃ in place of °lokaṃ. MT 18.1-16 (said to relate to the pūrvāmnāya) mentions *mantra*s 2a and 2b but gives the dhyāna of the ten-armed Gaṇapati (= 2c) for mantra 2b.

This form of Gaṇapati is not to be confused with Vīra-Gaṇapati (cf. KKD, quoted in Rao 1914-16, 1, appendix C, p. 9; PSSS, p. 465, 12-15; ŚTN 3.73; Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.5; and Mūrtidhyāna 4) or with Viriñci-Gaṇapati, who is said to have been worshipped by Brahmā (Viriñci) outside of Kāśī (cf. MT 18.17-24).

PSSS, p. 472, 9 ff. gives two *mantra*s (the corresponding *dhyāna*s differ) similar to the above-mentioned ones as *mantra*s of Śakti-Gaṇapati:

oṃ hrīṃ saṃ viri viri gaṇapati [v.l. °te] varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

3 For this form of Heramba, cf. p. 56.

oṃ hrīṃ saṃ viri viri gaṇapatyai vare varade sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

The dhyāna of the first form of Viri-Gaṇapati (= 2a and 2b) occurs in ŚT, MT, and ŚTN 3.87. According to ŚTN, he is called Vara-Gaṇapati. According to the NP 84.32-35ab he is called Vighnarāja (with consort Puṣṭi). He is found in the north-eastern direction as an āvaraṇa deity of the goddess. The second form (= 2c) is described only in ŚT and MT.

A sculpture of Viri-Gaṇapati is reported by MITRA 1958, p. 55, note 9b, to exist in the inner quadrangular of the temple of Jagannātha at Purī. As this author does not give the iconographic details, it cannot be decided whether this form agrees with 2a (and 2b) or with 2c. According to MISHRA 1971, p. 53, this sculpture, which shows Gaṇeśa touching his consort's sex-organ with his trunk, was brought from Kāñcī by King Puruṣottama on his Kāñcī-Kāverī expedition (about CE 1476) and was then installed in the Jagannātha Temple. It is still known as Kāñcī-Gaṇeśa.

SECTION 3

Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati

The Gaṇapati accompanied by Lakṣmī
(VT 2, pp. 674, 5 - 675, 5; VT 1, p. 260, 19-27)

Mantra: 29 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

śrīṃ gaṃ saumyāya mahāgaṇapataye varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Śrīṃ gaṃ, O best boon-giver, bring everyone under my control, svāhā to the gentle Mahā-Gaṇapati."

Seer: Antaryāmin

Metre: nicṛd-gāyatrī

Meditation:

	R	L
Up ↑	1: discus 2: gesture of protection trunk: holding golden vessel	1: conch 2: tusk is golden, has three eyes, wears yellow garments, and sits on a blue lotus; Lakṣmī, golden in lustre, sits on the left side of his lap, embraces him with her right arm, and holds a lotus in her left hand.

This form of Gaṇapati owes its name to the combination of the seed syllables śrīṃ (= lakṣmī-bīja) and gaṃ (= gaṇeśa-bīja) in the maṇtra and to the fact that Lakṣmī accompanies the deity. In iconography, the deity is represented with Lakṣmī sitting on his lap and holds the discus and conch, Viṣṇu's attributes.

An illustration of this form of Gaṇapati is provided (cf. Plate 10, Fig. 1) from an edition of the Mantraratnākara, a South Indian compilation; it shows the deity's attributes in a different order. Lakṣmī is not shown as embracing the deity or sitting on his lap; she holds a lotus in both R 1 and L 2 and shows the gesture of protection and the wish-granting gesture (?) with R 2 and L 2.

Yantra: two eight-petalled lotuses surrounded by three bhūpuras with two vīthis (cf. Plate 2):

Āvaraṇa 1: in the filaments of the first eight-petalled lotus:

1.-6. the śaktis of Gaṇeśa's limbs
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 2)

Āvaraṇa 2: in the petals of the first lotus:

7.-14. eight forms of Gaṇapati
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 3)

Āvaraṇa 3: in the petals of the second lotus, from the E the eight superhuman powers (siddhi):[1]

15. the power of becoming as small as an atom (aṇiman)
16. the power of increasing one's size at will (mahiman)
17. the power of assuming excessive lightness at will (laghiman)
18. the power of making oneself heavy at will (gariman)
19. greatness (īśitva)
20. the power of subduing others to one's will (vaśitva)
21. irresistible will (prākāmya)
22. the power of obtaining anything (prāpti)

Āvaraṇa 4: in the tips of the petals of the second lotus:

23.-30. the eight mothers (mātṛkā)
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 4)

Āvaraṇa 5: in the first vīthi:

31.-40. the ten guardians of the directions (dikpāla)
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 5)

Āvaraṇa 6: in the second vīthi:

41.-50. the attributes of the ten guardians of the directions
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 6)

---

1. The eight siddhis are the miraculous powers known from Yoga. In other texts we find lists of many more powers. For a list of ten siddhis visualized as female deities, cf. Tantrarājatantra 4.66-67ab. According to Sastri 1916, p. 173, some forms of Gaṇeśa are depicted in the company of goddesses who can be identified with the eight siddhis.

Puraścaraṇa:

japa	-	100,000
homa	-	with sacrificial sticks of Bilva wood smeared with molasses

Kāmyahoma: A homa of 4,000 offerings of coconuts smeared with molasses grants wealth, sons, friends, and a wife.

Other rites: Offering 440 water libations to Gaṇeśa for 40 days grants the desired wealth.

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati is not mentioned in texts like the PS or ŚT; it occurs in the MT 16.55cd-72ab (said to be related to the dakṣiṇāmnāya) and MMD 2.98-108 and (based on it) in the MM, pp. 66, 12 - 67, 19. MMD gives only a variant of the mantra: oṃ śrīṃ gaṃ saumyāya gaṇapataye . . . (in place of mahāgaṇapataye).

The dhyāna is identical to the one found in the VT, but the āvaraṇa deities worshipped in the yantra are different:

Āvaraṇa 1: the śaktis of Gaṇeśa's limbs

Āvaraṇa 2: eight śaktis:

Balākā, Vimalā, Kamalā, Vanamālikā, Vibhīṣikā, Mālikā, Śaṅkarī, Vasubālikā, Śaṅkhanidhi, and Padmanidhi

Āvaraṇa 3: the guardians of the (here:) eight directions and their attributes

The meditation in MM, p. 66, 21-22, differs in that the wish-granting gesture is mentioned in place of the conch. MT 16.55 mentions the mace in place of the tusk.

In other texts the type Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati occurs with a different description. The dhyānas of Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati found in KKD (quoted in Rao 1914-16, 1, appendix C, pp. 10-11), ŚTN 3.81, Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.13, and Mūrtidhyāna 12 (all identical) differ from the above-mentioned ones. The mantra of Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati found in PSSS, p. 474, 6-7, differs.[2] The Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati depicted on the prākāra wall of the Naṅjuṇḍeśvara Temple in Naṅjangūḍ[3] (no. 82) holds different attributes.

2. The mantra reads: oṃ namo lakṣmīgaṇeśāya mahyaṃ putraṃ prayaccha svāhā.

3. For the Gaṇapatis depicted on this prākāra wall, cf. p. 11.

is golden; contrary to expectation no consort is mentioned.

The name Śakti-Gaṇapati of this form may be explained by the seed syllable hrīṃ, the bīja of Bhuvaneśvarī. The deity has the golden colour of Lakṣmī.[3]

Yantra: eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three *bhūpura*s with two *vīthi*s (cf. Plate 3):

honey		subjugation of the king
parched grains		bride

Other rites:

1. On a lunar/solar eclipse mix a certain quantity of ghee from a brown cow and powdered Vacā root; charge the mixture with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra, divide it into 7 portions and drink one every day to become eloquent.[4]
2. The day a barren woman takes a bath after her monthly course, worship Gaṇeśa; mix powdered turmeric root, rock salt, and Vacā root in small quantities with cow's urine; charge the mixture with 1,000 repetitions of the mantra. Having fed a young girl with food of different kinds, having given a sacrificial gift to the preceptor, he should have the woman drink the mixture. She will give birth to an excellent son.

4b.

Mantra: 4 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

oṃ hrīṃ grīṃ hrīṃ

4. For a similar ritual, cf. section 8, rite 16, and section 13, rite 5.

This mantra is a variant of 4a with the syllable oṃ prefixed to it.

Yantra: eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three *bhūpura*s with two *vīthi*s (cf. Plate 4):

Kāmyahomas:

Other sources:

Ad 4a. This form of Gaṇapati occurs in ĪŚP 1.16.92 f.; PSSS, pp. 467, 18 - 470, 20; and MT 18.25-41[6] (said to be related to the pūrvāmnāya). ĪŚP names it Trivarṇa-Gaṇarāj (cf. 1.16.122) because the mantra has three syllables. ŚTN 3.88 calls the deity Tryakṣara-Gaṇapati. According to the dhyāna found in this text and also in PSSS, p. 467, 18 ff., the deity holds a mango fruit in place of a citron. The āvaraṇa deities mentioned in PSSS differ:

Āvaraṇa 1: the śaktis of Gaṇeśa's limbs

Āvaraṇa 2: ten forms of Gaṇapati:

Vighna, Vināyaka, Vīra, Śūra, Varada, Hastimukha, Ekadanta, Lambodara, Kṣipra(prasādana), and Mahāgaṇapati

Āvaraṇa 3: the eight mothers

Āvaraṇa 4: the guardians of the directions

Āvaraṇa 5: the attributes of the guardians of the directions

Ad 4b. This form occurs in MT 18.42-51; MMD 2.89-97, and MM, pp. 65, 4 - 66, 12. These two texts mention virāj as the metre (cf. 4a).

The term Śakti-Gaṇapati is used for a variety of forms of Gaṇapati accompanied by a consort. The Śakti-Gaṇapati described in KKD (quoted in Rao 1914-16, 1, appendix C, p. 9), ŚTN 3.74, Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.6, and Mūrtidhyāna 5 (all identical) does not agree with the above descriptions. ŚR 2.25.74 describes a form which is half male, half female. For a discussion of this form, cf. Bhattacharyya 1980, pp. 31 ff. Śakti-Gaṇapati depicted on the prākāra wall of the Nañjuṇḍeśvara Temple in Nañjangūḍ[7] (no. 84) also differs.

6. MT 16.95 f. gives the mantra as hrā (for hrāṃ?) hrīṃ hrīṃ; the text seems corrupt.

7. For the Gaṇapatis depicted on this prākāra wall, cf. p. 11.

SECTION 5

Kṣipraprasādana-Gaṇapati

The Gaṇapati who is quickly pleased (VT 2, pp. 676, 28 - 677, 27; VT 1, p. 260, 2-9, called Kṣipra-G.)

Mantra: 10 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

gaṃ kṣipraprasādanāya namaḥ

"Gaṃ salutation to the one who is quickly pleased."

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: virāj

Meditation:

UP	1: goad	1: noose
↑	2: wish-granting creeper	2: tusk

trunk: holding fruit of the citron tree is red, has three eyes, and bears a digit of the moon on his crest.

This form of Gaṇapati perhaps owes its name to the fact that it carries the wish-granting creeper as one of its attributes.

Yantra: eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three *bhūpura*s with two *vīthi*s (cf. Plate 4):

Āvaraṇa 1: in the filaments of the lotus:

1.-6. the *śakti*s of Gaṇeśa's limbs
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 2)

Āvaraṇa 2: in the lotus petals, from the E clockwise the eight Gaṇas:[1]

7. Vighna
8. Vināyaka
9. Śūra
10. Vīra

1. The eight names occur already in the Baudhāyana Dharmasūtra 2.5.9.7 in connection with tarpaṇa.

11. Varada
12. Ibhavaktra
13. Ekadanta
14. Lambodara

Āvaraṇa 3: in the tips of the lotus petals:

15.-22. the eight mothers
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 4)

Āvaraṇa 4: in the first vīthi:

23.-32. the ten guardians of the directions
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 5)

Āvaraṇa 5: in the second vīthi:

33.-42. the attributes of the ten guardians of the directions
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 6)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 100,000

homa - with sesame seeds smeared with the three sweet substances; or with the eight materials

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	Result
oblations smeared with sugar and ghee	wealth
ghee	subjugation
rice smeared with ghee	rice/food
coconuts with skin and shell	desired object parched grains, barley flour, and parched and flattened rice	desired object
eight materials smeared with three sweet substances	subjugation of kings and queens

Other rites:

1. Offer 444 water libations on Gaṇeśa's head for prosperity and wealth.
2. Having visualized Gaṇeśa as coming out of the orb of the sun on stairs and sitting on a lotus, offer water libations as above.

3. All rites described for Śakti-Gaṇapati I (= 4a) are applicable to this mantra also.

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati occurs in PS 17.64-78; PSSS, pp. 461, 16 - 463, 19; ŚT 13.92cd-106; ĪŚP 1.16.85-91; TS pp. 113, 20 - 114, 9; and MT 16.118-131 (said to be related to the dakṣiṇāmnāya).

ŚR 2.25.53 describes this Gaṇapati but calls him Bīja-Gaṇapati along with some other forms.

DMP 8.28 names three of the attributes, but the fourth and the fifth (tusk and fruit of the citron tree) are not mentioned as the text is corrupt.

Contrary to the VT, ŚTN distinguishes between Kṣipraprasādana-Gaṇapati (described in 3.89) and Kṣipra-Gaṇapati (3.79; also Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.11, and Mūrtidhyāna 10). The first form agrees with the description in the VT whereas the second one carries a vessel of jewels in the trunk instead of the fruit of the citron tree.

PS and PSSS explicitly mention four *āvaraṇa*s (instead of five), assigning the guardians of the directions and their attributes to one āvaraṇa.

The mantra of Kṣipra-Gaṇapati occurring in the Vanadurgā Upaniṣad, pp. 426 ff. and 429 ff., differs. Kṣipraprasādana occurs in the list of 56 Vināyakas of Kāśī,[2] in āvaraṇa 4, as no. 4.

The Kṣipraprasādana-Gaṇapati depicted on the prākāra wall of the Nañjuṇḍeśvara Temple in Nañjangūḍ[3] (no. 98) is accompanied by a consort; Kṣipra-Gaṇapati (no. 95) is a six-headed form.

2. For the list of the 56 Vināyakas in the SkP and MT, cf. pp. 13-15.

3. For the Gaṇapatis depicted on this prākāra wall, cf. p. 11.

SECTION 6

Heramba

(VT 2, pp. 677, 27 - 679, 8; VT 1, p. 260, 28 - 261, 5)

Mantra: 4 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

For the etymology of Heramba (buffalo?), cf. MAYRHOFER 1956-80 s.v. heramba.[1] The seed syllable of this form seems to be gūṃ.

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: gāyatrī

	4: modaka	4: tusk
	5: wish-granting gesture	5: gesture of protection

no attribute is held in the trunk; Heramba bears (a digit of) the moon on his crest and sits on a lion.

1. In his commentary on the Amarakośa Kṣīrasvāmin (pt. 1, p. 9, 24-25) states that Heramba is considered a deśya word.

The colours of the five faces of Heramba show close similarity to those of the five aspects of Śiva, known collectively as Pañca-brahmans and individually as Īśāna, Tatpuruṣa, Aghora, Vāmadeva, and Sadyojāta. In the form of Sadāśiva the five faces are united. The dhyāna of Sadāśiva occurring in ŚT 18.91[2] describes the five faces as being:

1. the colour of pearls
2. yellow
3. the colour of a rain cloud (= dark-blue)
4. the colour of mother of pearl
5. the colour of the China rose (= red).

Among the attributes usually held by Śiva are the trident, mace, skull, and axe. Heramba sits on a lion, Devī's vehicle, which forms part of the royal symbolism.

Yantra: eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three *bhūpura*s with two *vīthi*s (cf. Plate 5):

Āvaraṇa 1: in the filaments of the lotus:

(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 5)

Āvaraṇa 3: in the second vīthi:

---

2. The similarity between the *dhyāna*s of Sadāśiva and Heramba in the ŚT has already been pointed out by Mitra 1958, p. 52.

Other rites: A special yantra of Heramba for subjugation.

Other sources: A similar description of this form of Gaṇapati occurs in ŚT 13.107-121; TS, pp. 112, 24 - 113, 20; and MT 16.132-143 (said to be related to the uttarāmnāya).

Small variants in the dhyāna according to different authorities are reported in Rāghava's commentary on the ŚT, p. 333, 24-29.[3] (KKD [quoted in Rao 1914-16, 1, appendix C, p. 7][4]), ŚTN 3.80, Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.12, and Mūrtidhyāna 11 have noose and fruit (phala = bījāpūra) in place of the trident and skull. A small bronze figure agreeing with the description found in these texts is kept in the Nīlāyatākṣiyamman Temple, Nāgapaṭṭinam (cf. illustration III, fig. 112 — front side — in Sastri 1916, and Rao 1914-16, 1, plates XIII and XIV — front and back view). The attributes have been identified by Sastri 1916, p. 173. When I visited the temple in 1986, the bronze had been removed from its original place and was locked in a shrine near the main idol and covered with a garment, so that the attributes could not be seen clearly. Rao, ibid., p. 66, assigns the idol to the 15th century CE.

ŚR 2.25.58-60 gives the same dhyāna as VT, except that the trident is replaced by a noose. DMP 8.23 and RM 5.17 have an arrow and noose in place of the trident and modaka. It should be noted that in these texts Heramba is described as sitting on a rat.

PSSS, pp. 471, 14-16, gives Heramba's mantra as oṃ gaṃ namaḥ ; no dhyāna is provided.

Anantānandagiri's Śaṃkaravijaya, p. 87, 15 ff., describes a sub-sect (jñānamata) of worshippers of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati who worship the deity Heramba. The dhyāna describes Heramba as embracing and kissing his consort and touching her sex-organ with the tip of his trunk.[5] Heramba is also a general epithet of Gaṇapati. The Heramba Upaniṣad is not written in praise of the special five-headed form of Gaṇapati but eulogizes him in general.

3. According to Rāghava the wish-granting gesture is sometimes replaced by a vessel, the mace by a snake.

4. I follow the reading provided by the ŚTN; the text of the KKD quoted in Rao is corrupt as it names only nine attributes.

5. Cf. Śaṃkaravijaya, p. 87, 21-22: mahāpīṭhaniṣaṇṇaṃ taṃ vāmāṅko-parisaṃsthitām | devīm āliṅgya cumbantaṃ spṛśaṃs tundena vai bhagam ||

On the prākāra wall of the Nañjuṇḍeśvara Temple in Nañjangūḍ[6] three five-headed forms are seen: Gaurīputra-Vināyaka (no. 110), Sadāśiva-Gaṇapati with consort (no. 102), and Pañcamukha-Gaṇapati (no. 89). The form labelled as Heramba (no. 96) has only one head and eight arms. Heramba occurs in the list of 56 Vināyakas of Kāśī,[7] in āvaraṇa 3, no. 21, after another five-headed form (pañcāsya).

The form of Gaṇapati described in this section deserves special attention as varieties of this type are frequently represented in Indian, Nepalese, and Tibetan art. Compared to the earlier mentioned forms, this Gaṇapati belongs to the group of forms having more than one head. Five-headed forms are named Heramba or Pañcamukha-Gaṇapati. Their heads are arranged in different ways, they bear different attributes, sit on different vehicles, and are sometimes accompanied by a consort. The VT does not give instructions about the arrangement of the five heads. In art several traditions exist:

1. the heads are arranged in one row[8]
2. four of the heads face the cardinal points and the fifth is put centrally on the top[9]
3. the heads are arranged in three tiers, all facing the front: three at the bottom, one in the second tier, and one in the third tier.[10]

6. For the Gaṇapatis depicted on this prākāra wall, cf. p. 11.
7. For the list of the 56 Vināyakas, cf. pp. 13-15.
8. Cf. Bhattasali 1929, plate LVIb; Bhattacharyya 1980, fig. 5; Bala-Subrahmanyam 1975, plate 311; and Chanda 1936, plate XXIV.
9. Cf. the Heramba from the Nīlāyatākṣiyamman Temple described on p. 56.
10. This is a peculiarity of Nepalese and Tibetan art; cf. Getty 1936, plate 19, and Deva 1984, plate LXV A.

1. The VT points out that the ŚT reads here vacat°; the saṃdhi requires vacad° (cf. Rāghava, p. 334, 29). The name vacadbhū also occurs in ĪŚP 2.32.113: bhadrāsane kalpataror mūle pūjyo dhaneśvaraḥ ॥ 112cd ॥ padmaprabhāṃ padmahastāṃ tasya dakṣiṇavāmayoḥ । vacadbhuvaṃ ca nakulaṃ devyoḥ pārśvagatau sutau ॥ 113 ॥ dūtyau cāmarahaste cāpy ajitāṃ cāparājitām । tadagrādicaturdikṣu pūrṇabhadrādikān punaḥ ॥ 114 ॥ pūjayet — Here Dhaneśvara (= Kubera) is described as accompanied by his consorts Padmaprabhā (to his right) and Padmahastā (to his left). Padmaprabhā's son Vacadbhū is accompanied by Ajitā, Padmahastā's son Nakula by Aparājitā.

2. The form bacatbhū/vacatbhū (for vacadbhū) is ungrammatical, the present participle of vac being bruvan. As an archaic form preserved in a sacred mantra it may be understood as "from whom the speaker(s) [present participle] are born [bhū]." Zvelebil 1978 translates "who is the being of the world."

3. This variant is also recorded by Rāghava, p. 334, 32-33.

Other rites: Worship and feed Gaṇapati and life-long religious students (brahmacārin) who have repeated the mantra of Subrahmaṇya-Gaṇapati with food of different kinds and sweets on the 6th day of either half of the month to obtain wealth, long life, energy, sons, grandsons, fame, and cattle in this and the next world.

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati having the mantra, attributes, colour, and surrounding deities of Subrahmaṇya occurs only in a few texts. ŚT 13.122-132, mantra 7a at the end of chapter 13, which deals with *mantra*s of Gaṇeśa, describes the deity Subrahmaṇya, followed by a hymn to Gaṇeśa. Although the deity is named Subrahmaṇya and not explicitly Subrahmaṇya-Gaṇapati (as in VT and MT), it can be assumed that the author had in mind that form of Gaṇapati having the characteristics of Subrahmaṇya.

MT 16.144-155 (said to be connected with the uttarāmnāya) gives the mantra of Subrahmaṇya-Gaṇapati as: oṃ gaṇeśāya namaḥ (7 syllables) with the possibility of the mantra ending in oṃ (8 syllables) or beginning with oṃ hrīṃ (8 syllables). The meditation differs in respect to the attributes 1 and 4: 1. mace, 2. spear, 3. lotus, and 4. goad.

In the context of Subrahmaṇya's worship, unrelated to that of Gaṇeśa, the dhyāna occurring in the VT is found, e.g. in ŚR 2.25.65; the mantra and dhyāna occur in TSS 24.1 f. and Kumāratantra[8] 2.51+. Mantra 7a occurs in a series of *mantra*s of Subrahmaṇya where his six forms as found "in the Vedas" are described; cf. Kumāratantra 2.21+:

oṃ bhuvanabhuve namaḥ ॥

and Kumāratantra 2.21+: ṣaḍakṣaramantraḥ । vacadbhuve namaḥ ।

SECTION 8

Mahā-Gaṇapati

The great Gaṇapati
(VT 2, pp. 680, 10 - 699, 4; VT 1, p. 259, 23 - 260, 1)

Mantra: 28 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

oṃ śrīṃ hrīṃ klīṃ glauṃ gaṃ gaṇapataye varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Oṃ śrīṃ hrīṃ klīṃ glauṃ gaṃ svāhā to Gaṇapati, O best boon-giver, bring everyone under my control."

This mantra is particularly effective in the rites of subjugation, delusion, attraction, eradication, liquidation, and immobilization, and grants success in preparing elixirs and supernatural ointments, grants supernatural powers and control over Yakṣiṇīs.

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: nicṛd-gāyatrī

Meditation: The meditation describes Mahā-Gaṇapati as dwelling in a kind of heaven. The scene described in the following verses (VT 2, pp. 681, 19 ff.) illustrates the deity's greatness:

Mahā-Gaṇapati dwells on an island, which abounds in nine jewels, in the ocean of sugarcane juice. He sits on a lion throne, consisting of nine jewels, under a wish-granting tree of the Pārijāta species, which is being served simultaneously by the six seasons.

On the throne is a lotus consisting of the alphabet, in the centre of which a hexagon, and inside of it a triangle, are drawn. In the centre of the triangle Mahā-Gaṇapati sits. He holds the attributes:

	R	L
UP	1: lotus/conch (abja)[1]	1: discus
↑	2: noose	2: trident
	3: red lotus	3: bow of sugarcane
	4: tip of the rice shoot	4: mace
	5: tusk	5: fruit of the citron tree trunk holding a vessel with [illegible]

these may also be distributed in the following manner according to the Gaṇeśvaraparāmarśiṇī, recorded in VT 2, p. 682, 10-12:

	R	L
UP	1: tusk	1: tip of the rice shoot
↑	2: red lotus	2: noose
	3: lotus/conch (abja)[1]	3: discus
	4: trident	4: bow of sugarcane
	5: mace	5: fruit of the citron tree
	trunk: holding a vessel with jewels

is red, has three eyes, bears a digit of the moon on his crest, and is embraced by his consort who holds a lotus in one hand; sheds repeatedly in front of the worshipper a rain of jewels, pearls, and corals from the vessel held in his trunk; with the flapping of his fan-like ears he drives away bees which are desirous for the ichor flowing from his temples. He is served by gods and demons.

An illustration of this form of Gaṇapati with the attributes distributed in the first manner is provided in Plate 11.

This form of Gaṇapati holds attributes usually associated with other deities. The Vallabheśa Upaniṣad, chapter 1, says that the attributes were handed over to Gaṇapati by the deities who surround him as the first āvaraṇa:

the discus by Viṣṇu, the red lotus by Śrī, the trident by Śiva, the noose by Gaurī, the bow of sugarcane by Kāmadeva, the lotus by Rati, the mace by Varāha, the tip of the rice shoot by Bhūmi, the fruit of the citron tree by Puṣṭi, and the tusk by Puṣṭipati.[2]

Yantra: triangle, hexagon, eight-petalled lotus surrounded by three bhūpuras with two vīthis (cf. Plate 6):

Āvaraṇa 1: in the triangle inside the hexagon, the pairs of deities:

1. Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī — E

1. abja — "born from water" — is taken by some as "lotus" (e.g. Vallabheśa Upaniṣad, chapter 3) and by others as "conch" (e.g. commentary on PT, p. 465, 18). In iconography both interpretations are found.

2. Puṣṭipati and Puṣṭi, a form of Gaṇeśa with his consort (also Mahā-Gaṇapati and Mahālakṣmī), correspond to the fifth pair of deities of the first āvaraṇa.

2. Gaurīpati (= Śiva) and Gaurī — S
3. Ratipati (= Kāmadeva) and Rati — W
4. Kola (= Varāha) and Mahī — N
5. Gaṇanāyaka and Lakṣmī — "in front of Gaṇapati"

Āvaraṇa 2: in the hexagon, the six Vighnas and two Nidhis with consorts:

6. Āmoda and Siddhi — E
7. Pramoda and Samṛddhi — SE
8. Sumukha and Kānti — NE
9. Durmukha and Madanāvatī — W
10. Vighna and Madadravā — SW
11. Vighnakartṛ and Drāviṇī — NW
12. Śaṅkhanidhi and Vasudhārā — S
13. Padmanidhi and Vasumatī — N

Āvaraṇa 3: in the filaments of the lotus:

14.-19. the *śakti*s of Gaṇeśa's limbs
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 2)

Āvaraṇa 4: in the petals of the lotus:

20.-27. the eight mothers
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 4)

Āvaraṇa 5: in the first vīthi:

28.-37. the ten guardians of the directions

Āvaraṇa 6: in the second vīthi:

38.-47. the attributes of the ten guardians of the directions
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 6)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 111,000

homa - with the eight materials

Other rites: (The lengthy description of rites related to Mahā-Gaṇapati has been abbreviated here for lack of space.)

1. Worship Gaṇapati with red flowers, repeat the mantra 1,008 times, and offer red Karavīra flowers smeared with the three sweet substances in the fire: this subjugates a king, his court, and his army.

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	No. of offerings	Result
Palāśa flowers smeared with the three sweet substances		subjugation of twice-born men
ghee		fame
valuable articles (dhana) smeared with ghee		plenty of grain
red lotuses smeared with honey/sacrificial sticks of oleander wood	1,008	subjugation of the royal family

2. Repeat the mantra 1,008 times, offer black mustard, and salt balls smeared with ghee in the fire, collect the ashes and with them touch the desired woman; she will be subjugated.

3. Repeat the mantra in a Śiva temple 100,000 times; offer milk rice smeared with honey in the fire to obtain the desired objects.

Substance	No. of offerings	Result
Jātī flowers	1,008	wisdom, knowledge
3 blades of Dūrvā grass at a time	30,000	long life
yellow flowers	10,000	immobilization of the army of a king sticks of Vibhītaka wood	30,000	eradication of enemies sticks of Apāmārga	1,008	subjugation of courtesans
sticks of Eraṇḍa	1,008	subjugation of widows

4. Write the victim's name on Nimba leaves with the blood of a buffalo and a horse mixed with mustard oil; make 20,000 offerings of these leaves in the fire to cause dissension between persons who are attached to each other.

5. Prepare a wedge measuring 8 fingers' breadth from a human bone, cover it with the hair of a dead person's head, charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra, and bury it at an inauspicious moment at the victim's door: he will die after seven days.

6. Repeat the mantra near the opening of a cave 100,000 times: this attracts the daughters of Nāgas with their treasures.

7. Repeat the mantra on the top of a mountain 100,000 times to acquire the supernatural power of handling a sword (kṛpāṇaśakti).

8. Charge a mixture of powdered Lajjālukā plant, camphor, Nandyāvarta flower, white Aparājitā flower, and Śaṃkhapuṣpikā flower with 200,000 repetitions of the mantra. When it is applied to the eyes one is able to find treasures.
9. Charge sandalwood paste with 108 repetitions of the mantra. When applied this paste removes sorrow.
10. Repeating the mantra 108 or 1,008 times destroys various diseases.
11. Repeating the mantra 100,000 times fulfils wishes and grants the supernatural power of flying through the air by means of miraculous sandals.
12. Place a vessel filled with fragrant water on selected purified ground, worship it and cover it with an earthen dish filled with ghee from a brown cow. Light a wick in the ghee and worship the light. Bring and worship a young girl before puberty and a boy who has had the thread ceremony performed and charge them with 108 repetitions of the mantra. Both will be able to answer questions about the past, present, and future.
13. Repeat the mantra at night; Gaṇeśa will appear in a dream and tell about auspicious and inauspicious things.
14. Repeat the mantra at the time of a solar/lunar eclipse while lying in water (jalāśaya) to attract grain, cattle, and women.
15. Repeat the mantra under a Nyagrodha tree 100,000 times: a Yakṣiṇī will come and grant treasures.
16. Fasting at night bring a Vacā root, worship Gaṇeśa, and charge the root with 10,000 repetitions of the mantra. Powder the root and mix it with a certain quantity of ghee from a brown cow. Divide the mixture into 7 portions and eat one portion every morning. After 7 days one will be a poet.[3]
17. A method for preparing a magical ball; by carrying it in the mouth, one becomes invincible, acquires a body hard like a diamond, flies through the air, and becomes invisible; by keeping it at home, the ball ensures wealth and fixes the gaze of the world (on the bearer).
18. Another method for preparing a magical ball; by carrying it in the mouth, top knot, hand or around the neck, tigers, thieves, and snakes are kept away, and one becomes a king and is liked by women.

3. For a similar ritual, cf. section 4, rite 1, and section 13, rite 5.

19. Another method for preparing a magical ball for delusion.

20. Take the Amṛtā and Dīrghatuṇḍā plants, powder them, and apply the mixture to both hands; charge the hands with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra and show them to elephants in rut: they will run away.

21. Rite to be performed by a king who wants to catch elephants in the forest[4]: Prepare a pit for catching the elephants and perform a fire sacrifice with ghee and the eight substances smeared with the three sweet substances, the total number of offerings being 44,444. Within 44 days, young elephants and cow elephants will fall in the pit.

22. By offering milk, ghee, Unmatta flowers, sugar, honey, and rice, one obtains the magical ball named Vetāla and thereby acquires the eight superhuman powers.

23. Get up before dawn when the moon has set or on a moonless night, take the ghee of a brown cow on a lotus leaf and cowdung and, holding them above the ground, charge them with 10,000 repetitions of the mantra; bury the substances at the door to keep away tigers, hogs, snakes, thieves, and enemies.

24. Powder various herbal substances, mix them with the excretions of the five sense organs, and charge the mixture with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra: the person who eats it will be subjugated.

25. Repeat the mantra 1,008 times and make a fire sacrifice with Karavīra flowers and parched grains to obtain a bride.

26. Repeat the mantra 100,000 times to be freed from chains.

27. Charge various substances with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra to obtain a miraculous incense: when this incense is burnt, a man obtains long life and conquers diseases; a woman obtains happiness in marriage, and a young girl finds a bridegroom.

28. Repeat the mantra 100,000 times while lying in water (jalāśaya) for seven days: this brings rain.

4. The description of this rite in the PS has been translated in BÜHNEMANN 1987a, pp. 376-77.

Kāmyahomas (continued):

Substance	Result
honey	gold
cow's milk	cows
ghee	wealth
sugar	fame
curds	prosperity
cooked food	plenty of food
sesame seeds and rice grains	money
parched grains	fame
safflower with Karavīra flowers	garments
lotuses	subjugation of the king
water lilies	subjugation of the queen
white lotuses	subjugation of ministers
sacrificial sticks of Aśvattha, Udumbara, Plakṣa, and Vaṭa	subjugation of all castes dolls prepared from flour	subjugation of women
salt	causing the rain to cease
reeds	rain

29. Special yantra of Mahā-Gaṇapati which causes protection and victory when carried;

    draw the yantra and put it inside a statue of a beautiful woman; charge the statue with 108 repetitions of the mantra and heat it in the fire: in seven days the desired woman will be attracted.

    Write the yantra with different materials; tied to/buried at different things/places, it effects eradication, immobilization, and liquidation, and when dug out and washed with milk, pacification.

30. Another yantra of Mahā-Gaṇapati which has the sūkta ṚV 10.191 inscribed on it grants worldly pleasures and liberation, long life, health, prosperity, and fame.

31. Two special forms of Gaṇapati having 10 arms are to be meditated upon as having different colours according to the worshipper's aim; attributes held by these Gaṇapatis:

Form 1: 1. lotus, 2. goad, 3. noose, 4. tusk, 5. spear, 6. mace, 7. wish-granting gesture, 8. lotus/conch (abja), 9. stem of sugarcane, 10. tip of the rice shoot.

Form 2: 1. arrow, 2. quiver, 3. bow, 4. water vessel, 5. vessel with *modaka*s, 6. spear, 7. mace, 8. noose, 9. stem of sugarcane, 10. goad.

Colour of Gaṇapati	Result
yellow	immobilization
red	subjugation
black	liquidation
smoky	eradication
red	attraction
green	money
white	liberation

32. Variations of the rite of offering water libations to Mahā-Gaṇapati with four repetitions (total number: 444)[5] for special results;

the offering of libations on different parts of the body with specific materials brings particular results:

Body part	Substance	Result
tip of the trunk	water	liberation
head	milk	wealth
genitals	honey	sexual pleasure
eyes	three sweet substances	attraction and subjugation back	ghee	subjugation of kings
thighs	oil	pleasing Mahā-G.
navel	oil of Eraṇḍa	subjugation of widows shoulders	milk and water	increase of joy
trunk	milk, curds, and honey	increase of dharma

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati is described in detail in PS 17.1-46; PSSS, pp. 429, 2 ff.; ŚT 13.28-66; ĪŚP 1.16.1-33; TS, pp. 109, 19 - 111, 9; MT 17.1 ff. (said to be related to the ūrdhvāmnāya); NP 68.2-58, and Vallabheśa

5. This rite is also described in N, p. 14, 12 ff., and explained in detail in BÜHNEMANN 1998: (2002), pp. 102-07.

Upaniṣad, chapter 3 (eulogizes Mahā-Gaṇapati as Vallabhā-Gaṇapati or Vallabheśa).

As variants of the mantra of 28 syllables, Rāghavabhaṭṭa in his commentary on the ŚT, p. 322, 31-36 (327, 10-12), names:

- oṃ śrīṃ hrīṃ klīṃ glauṃ gaṃ gaṇapate (for gaṇapataye). . . (27 syllables); cf. also PSSS, p. 458, 6; 458, 21-22;
- . . . śrīmahāgaṇapataye (for gaṇapataye) . . . vaśaṃ vaśam . . . (32 syllables) and
- . . . mahāgaṇapate (for gaṇapataye) . . . (30 syllables).

Vallabheśa Upaniṣad, chapter 3, gives only the following version of the mantra:

- . . . gaṇapate varada varada (for gaṇapataye varavarada) . . . (28 syllables).

In the commentary on TSS 25.61-72, the following version occurs:

- . . . mahāgaṇapataye (for gaṇapataye) varada varada (for varavarada) . . . (31 syllables).

The dhyāna occurs also in Sāyaṇa's commentary on TĀ 10.1; N, p. 19, 12-19, 101, 27-30 (chapter 2 of this text is dedicated to the description of the Tantric worship of Mahā-Gaṇapati); and the commentary on PT, p. 465, 15-17. PrT, p. 596, 16-19, names only ten attributes, the noose being omitted. NP 68.17 and MT 17.19 list the attributes in an abbreviated manner. The dhyāna occurs also in Anantānandagiri's Śaṃkaravijaya, p. 82, 8-11. In this section a certain Girijāputra propagates the teaching of Mahā-Gaṇapati as the highest deity, the cause of the creation, maintenance, and destruction of the universe and lord of the gods Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Śiva.[6]

Regarding the distribution of the attributes in Gaṇeśa's hands, N agrees with the VT but changes the position of the conch and discus to the opposite hands. The commentaries on the PT, p. 465, 19, and on the PKS, p. 77, 8-10, recommend the following sequence:

6. For a translation of the passage Śaṃkaravijaya, p. 81, 12 - 82, 16, cf. BÜHNEMANN 1988a (2003), pp. XX-XXI.

As he is the most important form of Gaṇapati worshipped today by Hindu Tantrics and non-Tantrics as well, a number of sculptures, paintings, and modern prints of Mahā-Gaṇapati are found in Maharashtra, Kerala, and Tamil Nadu. In the South Indian tradition a number of representations come close to the form described in the VT but differ in a few attributes. Often the identification of the attributes poses problems as the sculptures are damaged or the attributes unclear.

The term Mahā-Gaṇapati is used also in a general sense for a number of ten-armed forms. The city of Pune has two temples dedicated to "Daśabhuja-Gaṇapati." The idol in one of these temples[8] is accompanied by a consort and shows similarity to the form described in the VT. But not all the attributes can be identified clearly.

I frequently observed the following distribution of attributes in contemporary prints and metal idols of Mahā-Gaṇapati:

	R	L
UP	1: discus	1: conch/lotus
↑	2: trident	2: noose
	3: bow of sugarcane	3: red lotus
	4: mace	4: tip of the rice shoot
	5: fruit of the citron tree	5: tusk

trunk: holding a vessel with jewels

7. The commentary on the PKS changes the position of the conch and discus to the opposite hands.

The following distribution of attributes occurred only a few times:

	R	L
UP	1: discus	1: conch
↑	2: mace	2: red lotus
	3: trident	3: noose
	4: bow of sugarcane	4: tip of the rice shoot
	5: fruit of the citron tree	5: tusk
	trunk: holding a vessel with jewels

There exists another type of Gaṇapati in the South Indian tradition called Uddaṇḍa-Gaṇapati (cf. ŚTN 3.93; Mūrtidhyāna 13), who is named Mahā-Gaṇapati in some texts (cf. KKD, quoted in Rao 1914-16, 1, appendix C, p. 11; Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.16). For his attributes according to the ŚTN, cf. the description given on p. 8, no. 24

On the prākāra wall of the Nañjuṇḍeśvara Temple in Nañjangūḍ[9] five sculptures of ten-armed Gaṇapatis occur, of which no. 87 is labelled Mahā-Gaṇapati and shows the deity accompanied by a consort; but the attributes do not agree with the description in the VT. No. 99, also labelled Mahā-Gaṇapati, has only eight arms.

Regarding the names of the deities of the āvaraṇas, small differences occur. According to PS, PSSS, ĪŚP, TS, NP, and N, there are only five āvaraṇas since the attributes of the guardians of the directions are not taken separately. The guardians with their attributes occupy the only bhūpura of the yantra.

In PS, PSSS, NP, and N, the first āvaraṇa is occupied by only four pairs of deities, the fifth one being omitted. The deities of the second āvaraṇa are assigned differently in some traditions. In the list of the six Vighnas, PS reads Vighna and Avighnakartṛ while PSSS and ŚT read Avighna and Vighnahartṛ; Vallabheśa Upaniṣad, chapter 4, also has the reading Avighna and Vighnahartṛ. This Upaniṣad gives a different yantra consisting of a dot, a triangle, a hexagon, an eight-petalled lotus, a sixteen-petalled lotus, three circles, and three bhūpuras.[10]

9. For the Gaṇapatis depicted on this prākāra wall, cf. p. 11.

10. For a sketch of this yantra, cf. Bühnemann 1987b, p. 245.

From the iconographic description occurring in this Upaniṣad it appears that Vallabhā-Gaṇapati/Vallabheśa, as he is called in South India, is identical to Mahā-Gaṇapati. From the introduction to the Upaniṣad we learn that this Gaṇapati was the son-in-law of Marīci, a form of Gaṇapati. Marīci's daughter Vallabhā, or Siddhalakṣmī, was given in marriage to Gaṇapati, who thereafter was named Vallabheśa. The sources of this story are not known. SOMAYAJI 1983, pp. 66-67, summarizes a similar story and ascribes it to the Bhārgava Purāṇa.[11] According to his account, Marīci was the mind-born son of Brahmā, and obtained the boon that the divine mother would be born as his daughter and Gaṇeśa would become his son-in-law. After some time a conch appeared before him, which was transformed into a girl and was named Vallabhā. She was given in marriage to Gaṇapati. Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī also gave their 12 daughters Modā, Pramodā, Subhagā, Sundarī, Manoramā, Maṅgalā, Kekinī, Katakā, Cāruhāsā, Sundarī (again!), Nandinī, and Kāmadā in marriage to Gaṇapati.

11. Could this be the Bhārgava Upapurāṇa? The edition entitled Bhārgava-Upapurāṇa . . . śrī-mahā-yogi-māhātmyaṃ nāma uttara-khaṇḍaḥ, printed at the Bhāgavata-varddhinī Press, Sundappalayam in 1910 in grantha characters, was not accessible to me. For a Bhārgava Purāṇa, also known as Vināyaka Purāṇa (in Tamil), cf. RAGHAVAN 1960, pp. 235-37. According to RAGHAVAN, this Purāṇa is partly based on an unpublished Vināyakamāhātmya, or Gaṇeśamāhātmya (ascribed to the SkP), and partly on the upāsanā-kāṇḍa of the Gaṇeśa Purāṇa. I examined manuscript no. 132/1899–1915 of the Vināyakamāhātmya kept in the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Pune, and the section of the Gaṇeśa Purāṇa, but could not locate this account of Vallabhā-Gaṇapati.

Trailokyamohana-Gaṇapati

The Gaṇapati who deludes the three worlds
(VT 2, pp. 699, 4-22)

Mantra: 33 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

vakratuṇḍaikadaṃṣṭrāya klīṃ hrīṃ śrīṃ gaṃ gaṇapate varavarada sarvajanaṃ me vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Klīṃ hrīṃ śrīṃ gaṃ, O Gaṇapati, O best boon-giver, bring everyone under my control, svāhā to the one who has a curved trunk and one tusk."

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: gāyatrī

Meditation: like Mahā-Gaṇapati (section 8)

This form of Gaṇapati is distinguished from Mahā-Gaṇapati only by the mantra, which differs in the initial part. Trailokyamohana/°hinī is the epithet of a great number of deities, e.g. Viṣṇu, Hanumān, and Lakṣmī.

Yantra: like Mahā-Gaṇapati

Puraścaraṇa: like Mahā-Gaṇapati

Other sources: This form is mentioned only in MT 17.831-837 (said to belong to the ūrdhvāmnāya); MMD 2.109-121; and MM, pp. 67, 19 - 68, 2 (called Trailokyamohanakara-Gaṇapati).

MMD and MT, which do not describe the form of Mahā-Gaṇapati at all, name the following surrounding deities:

Āvaraṇa 1: the śaktis of Gaṇeśa's limbs

Āvaraṇa 2: eight śaktis:

Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, Raudrī, Kalakālī, Balavikariṇī, Balapramathanī, Sarvabhūtadamanī, and Manonmanī

Āvaraṇa 3: four Gaṇeśas:

Pramoda, Sumukha, Durmukha, and Vighnanāśaka

Āvaraṇa 4: the eight mothers

Āvaraṇa 5: the ten guardians of the directions and their attributes

SECTION 10

Śakti-Gaṇapati II

The Gaṇapati with a consort II

(VT 2, pp. 699, 22 - 700, 11; VT 1, p. 261, 12-17)

Śakti-Gaṇapati I occurred in section 4; Śakti-Gaṇapati II has been dealt with separately in the VT because of the similarity of his mantra to that of the following Bhogalola-Gaṇapati (= section 11).

Mantra: 12 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

hrīṃ gaṃ hrīṃ mahāgaṇapataye svāhā

"Hrīṃ gaṃ hrīṃ svāhā to the great Gaṇapati."

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: nicṛd-gāyatrī

Meditation:

	R	L
UP	1: goad	1: vessel of jewels
↑	2: lotus	2: touching his consort's sex-organ is the colour of pearls, has three eyes, bears a digit of the moon on his crest, and is accompanied by a consort who holds his liṅga in her hand.

Yantra: like Mahā-Gaṇapati (section 8)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 100,000

homa - with apūpa cakes smeared with ghee

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	Result
sugarcane stems	kingdom, wealth
bananas and coconuts	subjugation
parched and flattened rice with sugar	subjugation of the king
barley flour	subjugation of Brahmins
ghee	money, grain, etc.

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati occurs only in ŚT 13.78cd-85 and (based on it) in TS, pp. 111, 10 - 112, 5.

SECTION 11

Bhogalola-Gaṇapati

The Gaṇapati who is eager for sexual enjoyment
(VT 2, pp. 700, 12-27)

Mantra: 11 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

oṃ hrīṃ gaṃ hrīṃ vaśam ānaya svāhā

"Oṃ hrīṃ gaṃ hrīṃ bring under my control svāhā."

The first part of this mantra agrees with that of Śakti-Gaṇapati II (= section 10).

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: nicṛd-gāyatrī

Meditation:

	R	L
UP	1: goad	1: noose
↑	2: wish-granting gesture	2: stem of sugarcane trunk: touching consort's sex-organ is red, has three eyes, bears (a digit of) the moon on his crest, and is accompanied by a consort who touches his liṅga.

This form of Gaṇapati derives its name from Gaṇapati's attempt at sexual union. This form is similar to Viri-Gaṇapati (= section 2) and Śakti-Gaṇapati II (= section 10).

Yantra: like Mahā-Gaṇapati (= section 8)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa	-	300,000
homa	-	with apūpa cakes smeared with ghee

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	Result
apūpa cakes smeared with the three sweet substances	subjugation of the king
coconuts	kingdom, increase of prosperity
balls of salt smeared with the three sweet substances	subjugation of the beloved

Other sources: This form of Gaṇapati occurs only in PSSS, p. 473, 9 – 474, 4 (named Śakti-Gaṇapati with Mantradevatāprakāśikā quoted there); ŚT 13.86-92 (called Bhogātilola-Gaṇapati); TS, p. 112, 6-22; and MT 18.63-68ab (ascribed to the pūrvāmnāya, named Śakti-Gaṇapati).

SECTION 12

Haridrā-Gaṇapati

The Gaṇapati of turmeric
(VT 2, pp. 700, 28 - 708, 30)

Mantra: 32 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

oṃ hūṃ[1] gaṃ glauṃ haridrāgaṇapataye varavarada sarvajanahṛdayaṃ stambhaya stambhaya svāhā

"Oṃ hūṃ[1] gaṃ glauṃ, O best boon-giver, immobilize, immobilize the hearts of all people, svāhā to Haridrā-Gaṇapati."

This mantra is to be learnt through a particular ritual: On the 4th day of the bright half of the month, the disciple applies turmeric powdered by a girl to his body, takes a bath, and worships his preceptor, who then teaches the mantra. The mantra is said to grant both worldly pleasures and liberation and develop poetic skills in the reciter; its repetition gives quick results; the mantra grants prosperity, wealth, and long life and is useful for acts like subjugation and for many other purposes.

Seer: Madana

Metre: anuṣṭubh

Meditation:

	R	L
UP	1: goad	1: noose
↑	2: gesture of anger (krodhamudrā)[2]	2: axe
	3: gesture of protection	3: wish-granting gesture is yellow, has three eyes, wears yellow garments, and sits on a jewelled lion throne.

1. Huṃ is also possible. Hūṃ/huṃ represents the seed syllable of anger (krodha-bīja).
2. According to VT 2, p. 702, 1, this mudrā is identical to the (clenched) fist (muṣṭi). Muṣṭi is defined in Bharata's Nāṭyaśāstra 9.55: aṅgulyo yasya hastasya talamadhye 'grasaṃsthitāḥ | tāsām upari cāṅguṣṭhaḥ sa muṣṭir iti saṃjñitaḥ || The mudrā is associated with beating, grasping a sword, and holding spears and clubs.

This form of Gaṇapati owes its name to the turmeric root, which is used in preparing the idol. Powdered turmeric (haridrā, rātri) figures in all rites connected with this deity, who is therefore also known as Rātri-Gaṇapati. Moreover, the yellow colour of turmeric is important in the rite of immobilization,[3] which is suggested by the wording of the mantra. The krodhamudrā may also be significant in this connection.

Yantra: like Ekākṣara-Gaṇapati (section 1)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 1,008

homa - with apūpa cakes smeared with ghee and molasses

Other rites:

1. Special yantra for immobilization; its use:

   On Sunday, Wednesday, or Friday night go to a deserted place, get turmeric powdered by a girl, and mix it with soil brought from eight houses; charge the mixture with 25 repetitions of the mantra and use it for drawing the yantra on cloth; infuse it with life; prepare an idol of Haridrā-G. from turmeric, put the folded yantra inside, infuse it with life, and worship it; place the idol into an earthen vessel, repeat the mantra 1,008 times, worship it with yellow flowers, and offer a special rice dish (siddhaudana); then cover the vessel with a lid. After worshipping the idol for 12 days, it can be put in particular places where immobilization is desired.

2. The same yantra modified for attraction; its use:

   a. The same procedure as above (= 1.) is followed for 7 days with the yantra modified for causing attraction.

   b. Using molasses mixed with water, draw the yantra on palm leaf, worship it as above (= 1.), put it in goat's milk; facing the victim's direction, boil it gently while charging it with repetitions of the mantra: this attracts the desired woman.

   c. Prepare a doll from a mixture of salt, asafoetida, turmeric, and wax, infuse it with life, heat it in fire, and charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra to attract the desired woman.

3. Kulārṇavatantra 16.96 prescribes the use of yellow items in connection with the rite of immobilization. In this connection, cf. also Goudriaan 1978, p. 148.

d. Draw the yantra on a betel leaf smeared with honey; recalling the victim, infuse it with life, charge it with repetitions of the mantra, and eat it: the desired woman will be attracted.

e. Draw the yantra on a leaf, flower, cloth, or piece of silk, and infuse it with life: the person to whom it is given will be attracted.

f. Offer 1,008 water libations to Gaṇapati to attract a person.

3. The same yantra modified for subjugation; its use:

a. Draw the yantra with a mixture of turmeric powder, sugarcane juice, salt, yellow pigment (rocanā), and honey on a piece of cloth; put it inside an idol of Haridrā-Gaṇapati (cf. the procedure given in 1.), infuse it with life, put it in a vessel, and worship it; facing the victim's direction, charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra and cover the vessel with a lid. After seven days the victim will be subjugated.

b. Prepare a lump of turmeric powder, rice flour, molasses, honey, and salt and fry it in ghee; make an idol of Gaṇeśa from it and put the yantra inside; infuse it with life and worship it for three days; remove the yantra and eat the idol; the victim will be subjugated.

c. Make a doll from the lump mentioned above, infuse the doll with life, and charge it with 108 repetitions of the mantra; eat it, having the victim in mind: the victim will be subjugated.

d. Draw the yantra on any eatable, infuse it with life, charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra, and eat it: the victim will be subjugated.

e. Draw the yantra on a mixture of sandalwood paste, Agaru, camphor, turmeric powder, kuṅkuma, yellow pigment (rocanā), musk, and elephant's ichor; prepare an idol of Gaṇeśa and repeat the mantra 108 times. Rub the mixture on the body and put a mark on the forehead. By a simple gaze or touch, a woman will subjugate a man and vice versa.

f. Draw the yantra on a mixture of special ingredients and sugarcane juice, prepare an idol of Gaṇeśa, infuse it with life, and charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra. From the leftover material apply a mark on the forehead to subjugate Kubera and gain immense wealth.

g. Offer a mixture of ingredients in the fire, draw the yantra in the ashes, infuse them with life, worship them as Haridrā-Gaṇapati, charge them with 108 repetitions of the mantra; collect the ashes and apply them on the forehead and other parts of the body for prosperity, wealth, etc.

h. Application of specially obtained lamp-black which has been charged with 108 repetitions of the mantra to the eyes and of substances to the forehead for subjugating others.

i. Make an idol of Gaṇeśa from turmeric at the time of a lunar eclipse; infuse it with life, charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra, and put it on the top-knot[4] to be victorious.

j. Draw the yantra on a betel leaf with turmeric water; infuse it with life and charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra; eat the betel leaf to subjugate the victim.

k. Draw the yantra in cow's milk mixed with sugar which has been boiled until solidified; make an idol of Gaṇeśa from it, charge it with 108 repetitions of the mantra, and eat it to subjugate the victim.

l. Powder and mix together the three myrobalans (triphala) and offer along with a coconut and molasses in the fire, leaving a remnant; charge the remnant with 108 repetitions of the mantra; whoever eats it will be subjugated.

4. The same yantra modified for eradication; its use:

Draw the yantra on a cloth used on a dead body to which turmeric has been applied with ashes from the cremation ground, using a crow's feather[5] as a writing instrument; infuse the yantra with life; burn two sticks from a crow's nest on a Nimba tree in the fire of the cremation ground, collect the ashes, mix them with sand found near the door of a Gaṇeśa temple and put these on the yantra; make an idol of Gaṇeśa, put the yantra inside, and infuse it with life; prepare a vessel and a lid from potter's clay and the

4. For the practice of putting the idol of Gaṇeśa in the top-knot, cf. section 1, rite 1.

5. Kulārṇavatantra 16.47 prescribes a crow's tail feather as a writing instrument in the "cruel" rites. For a connection between crow's feathers and the rite of eradication, cf. NIHOM 1988, pp. 104-05.

dust from the victim's foot, put the idol in the vessel and charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra; cover the vessel with the lid and bury it near the victim's door. The victim will be eradicated after one month. For eradication the idol of Gaṇeśa can be put in various places. The ashes inside the idol cause death when thrown at persons/places.

5. The same yantra modified for dissension; its use:
   a. Draw the yantra on a cloth used on a dead body with a mixture of substances; infuse it with life; put ashes obtained from burning five parts of a Nimba tree and a crow's nest found on it on the yantra; make an idol of Gaṇeśa, put the yantra inside, and infuse it with life; put the idol in a vessel and charge it with 1,008 repetitions of the mantra; cover the vessel with a lid and bury it near the house of friends to cause dissension; or throw the idol in between two friends to obtain the same effect.
   b. Take the ashes inside the idol and throw them on the footpath. This will cause dissension between people who walk on it.
   c. Wherever the idol of Gaṇeśa worshipped in the above-mentioned way is established, it will cause dissension.
6. The same yantra modified for liquidation; its use:

   Draw the yantra on a cloth used on a dead body to which turmeric has been applied with the exudation of bones burnt at the funeral pyre or a mixture of other substances, using a crow's feather as a writing instrument; infuse the yantra with life; make an idol of Gaṇeśa, put the yantra inside, and infuse it with life; collect soil from a temple of Gaṇeśa or other specific places and prepare a vessel and a lid from it; put the idol in the vessel and charge it with repetitions of the mantra, facing the south on the night of the 14th lunar day of the month; cover the vessel with the lid and bury it at the juncture of roads, in a cemetery, on an anthill, or in the hollow of the poisonous Kāraskara[6] tree. The victim will die of fever after seven days.

6. Kulārṇavatantra 16.119-125ab mentions the Kāraskara tree in connection with the rites of causing dissension, eradication, and liquidation.

Other sources: MT 16.156-173 (said to belong to the dakṣiṇāmnāya) and Ṣaṭkarmadīpikā, pp. 243, 4 - 248, 24, agree with the VT in respect to the mantra and dhyāna of this form of Gaṇapati. The Ṣaṭkarmadīpikā includes the mantra in the section on immobilization. According to this text, the wording of this mantra may be changed with substituting stambhaya stambhaya by ākarṣaya ākarṣaya ("attract! attract!") when it is employed in the act of attraction (ākarṣaṇa).

PSSS, pp. 465, 16 - 466, 4, MMD 2.122-133, and MM, pp. 69, 2 - 70, 16, agree only in respect to the mantra. TS, pp. 114, 11 - 115, 3, differs also in respect to the mantra, which is glauṃ; Vasiṣṭha is said to be the seer and gāyatrī the metre. Glauṃ is usually known as the seed syllable of the earth and is used for the act of immobilization.

Regarding the dhyāna, there are different traditions:

(1) TS, MMD, MM, and ŚTN 3.90 describe a four-armed variety of the deity holding: 1. noose, 2. goad, 3. modaka, 4. tusk.

(2) PSSS and Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.18, give an eight-armed variety accompanied by two consorts holding: 1. noose, 2. goad, 3. bow of sugarcane, 4. arrow, 5. lotus, 6. tusk, 7. tip of the rice shoot, 8. vessel with jewels.

(3) Anantānandagiri's Śaṃkaravijaya, p. 86, 2-5, quotes the following attributes from the SkP: 1. noose, 2. goad, 3. stem (of sugarcane), 4. gesture of protection.

This text describes a separate sect of worshippers of Haridrā-Gaṇapati (pp. 85, 1 - 86, 9). On the basis of the mantra: gaṇānāṃ tvā gaṇapatiṃ . . . (ṚV 2.23.1), the leader of the sect, a certain Gaṇapatikumāra, tries to prove that Gaṇapati occupies the highest place among deities.

The PrT, p. 611, 6-22 (quoting the 10th adhyāya of the Nārada-Pañcarātra[7]), narrates the "origin" of this form of Gaṇapati. One day Pārvatī was grinding turmeric and formed a doll from it. (After bringing it to life) she considered Haridrā-Gaṇapati as her son and gave him to Śiva, who brought him up. Following his father's advice, the son practised japa of the five-syllabled mantra of Ugratārā in the mountains of Kāmarūpa to please the goddess Kāmākhyā. After his successful return, Śiva bestowed on Haridrā-Gaṇapati the power to grant the fruit of the four goals of human life to his worshippers.

7. I have not been able to identify this passage in the Nārada-Pañcarātra.

A Haridrā-Gaṇapati, whose iconographic details are not specified, is to be worshipped by pilgrims on their way to Amarnāth/Kashmir according to the Amareśvaramāhātmya 1.7-8.[8] The editors of this text identify the place with the village Hārīpārīgām.

UP	1: goad	1: noose
↑	2: wish-granting gesture	2: gesture of protection

is golden-red, has three eyes, and sits on a lotus.

A bronze statue of Vakratuṇḍa from Gujarat (18th cent. CE) which agrees with this dhyāna is described in MEHTA 1947-48, p. 26, and depicted ibid., plate 6.

Yantra: two eight-petalled lotuses surrounded by three *bhūpura*s with two *vīthi*s (cf. Plate 7):

Āvaraṇa 1: in the filaments of the first lotus:

1.-6. the śaktis of Gaṇeśa's limbs
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 2)

1. The VT also permits hūṃ.

Āvaraṇa 2: in the roots of the petals of the first lotus, from the E: eight śaktis:

7. Vidyā
8. Viśvadhātrī[2]
9. Bhogadā
10. Vighnaghātinī[3]
11. Nidhipradā[4]
12. Pāpaghnī
13. Puṇyā
14. Śaśiprabhā

Āvaraṇa 3: in the petals of the first lotus:

15.-22. the eight superhuman powers (siddhi)
(cf. section 3, āvaraṇa 3)

Āvaraṇa 4: in the petals of the second lotus:

23.-30. eight forms of Gaṇapati
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 3)

Āvaraṇa 5: in the first vīthi:

2. NP, MMD, and MM read: Vidhātrī.
3. MT reads: Vighnanāśinī; NP reads: Vipraghātinī.
4. NP, MMD, and MM read: Nidhipradīpā.

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	No. of offerings	Result
rice dish	300; 3 months	wealth parched and flattened rice grains smeared with molasses, coconuts, and black pepper	1,000	wealth
apūpa cakes made of rice flour, black pepper, rock salt, cumin-seeds, and a large quantity of molasses and ghee	1,000	wealth sticks of Apāmārga, ripe jackfruits or bananas	1,000	subjugation
parched grains	1,000	bride
ghee or milk	1,000	health
Dūrvā grass	100,000	long life
sticks of Palāśa wood smeared with the three sweet substances	1,000; 1 month	victory over enemies sticks of Vibhītaka wood smeared with blood offered at night in the fire of the cremation ground	1,008	liquidation of enemies
(draw a figure of the enemy, enkindle fire on its stomach, and offer) white mustard	1,000; 7 days	liquidation of enemies

Other rites:

1. Visualize Gaṇeśa as resembling a dark cloud, seizing the enemy with his trunk and throwing him in the fire or in the ocean; repeat the mantra 1,000 times; after three days Gaṇeśa will eradicate the enemy.
2. Take water from a river flowing into the sea in the palms of the hands, charge it with 1,000 repetitions of the mantra, and pour it over the head. This destroys the evil one has accumulated.
3. Under an Aśvattha tree, on a Saturday, repeat the mantra 3,000 times and recall Gaṇeśa. He will destroy evil arising from unfavourable constellations of planets.

Kāmyahomas (continued):

Substance	No. of offerings	Result
sticks of reed	1,000	rain
grains		grains
rice		rice
lotuses/water lilies		garments
sweets of sesame smeared with molasses		land

4. Mix powdered turmeric root, rock salt, and Vacā root in small quantities with cow's urine; charge the mixture with 1,000 repetitions of the mantra. A barren woman who has just bathed after her monthly course and is wearing white garments should drink the substance: she will give birth to a son within one year.[5]
5. Fasting on a lunar/solar eclipse mix a certain quantity of ghee from a brown cow and powdered Vacā root; charge the mixture with 1,000 repetitions of the mantra, and drink it to obtain intelligence and poetic skill.[6]
6. Rite to make a girl and a boy answer questions about the past, present, and future (cf. section 8, rite 12).

13b.

Mantra: 6 syllables (from the Sārasaṃgraha):

megholkāya svāhā

"Svāhā to Megholka [the fire of the cloud]."

Seer, metre, meditation, yantra, rites: as in 13a.

Mantra: 32 syllables (from the "Atharvaveda"):

rāyaspoṣasya dayitā nidhido ratnado vadaṃ[7] ।
rakṣohaṇo vo valagahano vakratuṇḍāya hūṃ ॥

5. This rite is also prescribed in connection with Śakti-Gaṇapati I (cf. section 4, rite no. 4).
6. For a similar ritual, cf. section 4, rite 1, and section 8, rite 16.

"He is considered a giver of wealth and abundance, a giver of treasures, a giver of jewels. He is a destroyer of demons, a destroyer of secret charms for your sake, hūṃ to Vakratuṇḍa."

Seer, metre, meditation, yantra: as in 13a.

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 12,000
homa- with oblations smeared with ghee

13d.

Mantra: Vakratuṇḍa-Gāyatrī:

tatpuruṣāya vidmahe vakratuṇḍāya dhīmahi ।
tan no dantī pracodayāt ॥

"We know that puruṣa. We meditate on the one who has a curved trunk. Therefore may the one with one tusk inspire us."

This mantra is to be recited at the time of bathing to achieve one's object.

13a-d.

Other sources:

Ad 13a. This mantra occurs in PSSS, p. 464, 13-19; ĪŚP 1.16.50 f. (mentions Siddha-Vināyaka [!] as deity); MT 18.182-225 (said to belong to the pūrvāmnāya); NP 68.64-80ab; MMD 2.1-25ab; and MM, pp. 58,1 - 60,8.

Ad 13b. This mantra occurs in MT 18.226-227 (said to belong to the pūrvāmnāya); MMD 2.29cd-31ab; and MM, pp. 60, 8-10. It occurs already in Agni Purāṇa (Kolkata ed.) 347.22 in the following form: megholkāya gaṇādhipataye svāhā.

The epithet Ulka for Gaṇapati occurs in Agni Purāṇa (Pune ed.) 79.3 (description of caturthīvrata):

āgaccholkāya cāvāhya gaccholkāya visarjanam । ulkāntair yādi-gandhādyaiḥ pūjayen modakādibhiḥ ॥ oṃ gaholkāya vidmahe vakratuṇḍāya dhīmahi ।
tan no dantī pracodayāt ॥

and 348.26:

samodako 'tha gandhādi gandholkāyeti ca kramāt ।
gajo mahāgaṇapatir maholkaḥ pūjya eva ca ॥

A connection between Megholka and the form of Gaṇapati called Vakratuṇḍa is seen in the above-quoted Gāyatrī.

Ad 13c. This mantra occurs also with v.l. in the following texts: Gaṇeśapūrvatāpanīya Upaniṣad 1.7:

rāyaspoṣasya dātā nidhidātānnado mataḥ ।
rakṣohaṇo vo balagahano vakratuṇḍāya huṃ ॥

MT 18.228-234ab with two variations (said to belong to the pūrvāmnāya):

a) rāyaspoṣasya dayitā nidhido ratnado mataḥ ।
rakṣohaṇo balagahano vakratuṇḍāya huṃ ॥

b) rāyaspoṣasya dayitā nidhido ratnado nṛmān ।
rakṣohaṇo balagahano vakratuṇḍāya hūṃ ॥

MMD 2.25cd-29ab and MM, p. 60, 10-18, read:

rāyaspoṣasya daditā nidhido ratnadhātumān ।
rakṣohaṇo balagahano vakratuṇḍāya huṃ ॥

The words rakṣohaṇo vo valagahanaḥ occur already in VS 5.25 (Mādhyandina recension; Kāṇva recension: 5.31 rakṣohaṇo valagahanaḥ). They are part of formulas recited when preparing four holes (uparava) used in the extraction of soma juice and were adopted in this context because of the meanings "destroyer of demons" and "destroyer of secret charms," which were found suitable as epithets of Gaṇapati.[8]

Ad 13d. The Vakratuṇḍa-Gāyatrī, an adaption of the Sāvitrī-Gāyatrī, occurs already in TĀ 10.1 (v.l. in c: dantiḥ) and is frequently quoted by many texts, like Gaṇeśātharvaśīrṣa Upaniṣad. I therefore do not give further references.

The dhyāna found in the VT occurs uniformly in the following texts: PSSS, IŚP[9], MT, NP, MMD, MM, DMP 8.25, and RM 5.18.

Apart from being a specific form of Gaṇapati, Vakratuṇḍa occurs also as a general epithet of Gaṇapati in many texts.

Vakratuṇḍa also figures in the list of 56 Vināyakas of Kāśī (āvaraṇa 3, no. 1).[10]

8. This has already been observed by BERGMANN in her edition of the Gaṇeśatāpanīya Upaniṣad, vol. 2, p. 40.

9. The IŚP states that Gaṇeśa shows the wish-granting gesture and holds his tusk with the same hand.

Other rites:

This mantra can be used for immobilization, delusion, liquidation, subjugation, attraction, and causing dissension.

1. Make an idol of Gaṇeśa the size of the victim's thumb from Nimba wood and charge it with repetitions of the mantra to obtain the desired object.
2. On the night of the 8th and 14th day of the dark half of the month repeat the mantra in a ritually impure (ucchiṣṭa) condition to obtain the desired object.
3. Write the name of the victim on a leaf of birch-bark, surrounded by the mantra of Gaṇeśa. Charge this yantra with repetitions of the mantra and then step on it with one foot to attract the victim by force.

1. Cf. the expression ucchiṣṭātman in mantras 14c, 14d, 14h, and 14i. In the rites connected with this form of Gaṇapati, the worshipper repeats the mantra (japa) while being ucchiṣṭa, i.e. ritually impure, e.g. by reciting the mantra naked (cf. VT 2, p. 714, 7) or by reciting it after eating at night (VT 2, p. 714, 11).

2. Hastipiśācī is a type of piśācī (cf. Karṇapiśācinī — "the Piśācinī who whispers in one's ear," MMD 7.50 ff.). She is called Hasti-(elephant's)piśācī because she belongs to Gaṇapati. This mantra would be more appropriately connected with

A similar rite can be performed to subjugate the victim.

4. Carry such a yantra on the head and repeat the mantra to attract the king and queen.
5. Give betel leaves, flowers, garments, ornaments, fruits, roots, etc. charged with 21 repetitions of the mantra to the victim to subjugate him.
6. By a gift of incense of sandalwood the king is subjugated.

Kāmyahomas:

Substance	Result
sacrificial sticks of Nimba wood with mustard oil and wings of crows	eradication of an enemy and his army
wings of owls and crows along with their marrow and blood offered in the fire of the cremation ground	dissension

7. Take a lump of clay from a potter's hand, dust from the victim's foot, ashes from the cremation ground, and dirt from the victim's body and make a doll; write the victim's name on the doll's heart surrounded by the principal mantra of Gaṇeśa; infuse the doll with life and place it in a vessel which is filled with poison and blood; charge the doll with repetitions of the mantra: the victim will die soon.
8. Collect the ashes of a husband and wife who have been burnt on pyres, add yellow pigment (rocanā) and kuṅkuma and write with it the victim's name surrounded by the principal mantra of Gaṇeśa on a leaf of birch-bark. Infuse this yantra with life and charge it with 108 repetitions of the mantra. Persons who dislike each other will come to like each other.

A modern stone sculpture of this Gaṇapati from the Śāradādevī Temple, Kāladī, shows the goad and tusk in R 1 and R 2, and the noose and a single modaka in L 1 and L 2 (depicted in Rao 1914-16, 1, plate X, fig. 1, and described ibid., p. 63).

5. In the earlier case (cf. p. 37) of the representation of the ten guardians of the directions in the yantra, Ananta (to be placed "below") is shown between SW and W and Brahmā ("above") between E and NE. The same principle is probably to be followed in this case.

6. This list of names differs slightly from the list in section 1, āvaraṇa 3, where eight Gaṇapatis occur.

24. Hastidanta — "above", shown in the yantra figure between E and NE[5]

Āvaraṇa 4: in the first vīthi:

25.-34. the ten guardians of the directions
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 5)

Āvaraṇa 5: in the second vīthi:

35.-44. the attributes of the ten guardians of the directions
(cf. section 1, āvaraṇa 6)

Puraścaraṇa:

japa - 100,000

homa - with sesame seeds smeared with ghee

Other rites:

1. Make an idol of Gaṇeśa the size of one's thumb from the root of the white Arka tree or the wood of the Markaṭī tree and worship it by offering a bath of honey and food preparations from the 1st day of the dark half of the month to the 14th of the bright half; repeat the mantra 1,000 times daily; naked and visualizing yourself as being Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇeśa, perform a fire sacrifice with sesame seeds smeared with ghee to obtain a kingdom within a fortnight.

   An idol made from potter's clay in the same rite will also procure a kingdom; an idol made from soil from an anthill will procure everything desired; one made from molasses grants a woman happiness in marriage; one made from salt destroys enemies.

2. The reciter of the mantra will be victorious in war, gambling, and debate. By the power of this mantra Kubera became rich and Vibhīṣaṇa and Sugrīva obtained their kingdoms. This mantra should be repeated while wearing red garments and chewing betel at night or eating a modaka from the food offered to Gaṇeśa.

Mantra: 12 syllables (source?); this is a variant of mantra 14a:

oṃ hrīṃ gaṃ hastipiśācilikhe svāhā

"Oṃ hrīṃ gaṃ svāhā to the one who has intercourse with the Hastipiśācī."[2]

Seer, etc.: no details

14g.

Mantra: 19 syllables (source?):

oṃ namaḥ ucchiṣṭagaṇeśāya hastipiśācilikhe svāhā

"Oṃ obeisance to Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇeśa, svāhā to the one who has intercourse with the Hastipiśācī."[2]

Seer, etc.: no details

14h.

Mantra: 37 syllables (source?); variant of mantra 14d:

oṃ namo bhagavate ekadaṃṣṭrāya hastimukhāya lambodarāya ucchiṣṭamahātmane āṃ kroṃ hrīṃ gaṃ ghe ghe svāhā

"Oṃ obeisance to the venerable one who has one tusk, to the one who has an elephant face (and) a protruding belly, to the great-souled Ucchiṣṭa, āṃ kroṃ hrīṃ gaṃ ghe ghe svāhā."

Seer: Gaṇaka

Metre: gāyatrī

Meditation: (distribution of attributes not specified:) 1. arrow, 2. bow, 3. noose, 4. goad; sits on a lotus and has intercourse with his naked consort.

An illustration of this form of Gaṇapati having intercourse with his consort from an edition of the Mantraratnākara (Plate 10, Fig. 2), shows the goad and arrow in R 1 and R 2, and the noose and bow in L 1 and L 2. The same distribution of attributes is seen in the Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati from Nañjangūḍ[7], depicted in Rao 1914-16, 1, plate XII. This sculpture does not show the deity having intercourse with his consort.

Puraścaraṇa:

japa	-	100,000
homa	-	with ghee

Other rites:

1. Make an idol of Gaṇeśa from the wood of a Nimba tree broken by an elephant; infuse it with life and charge it with repetitions of the mantra to subjugate the victim.

7. This Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati is not found on the prākāra wall of the Nañjuṇḍeśvara Temple. No. 92 of this prākāra wall differs from the descriptions of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati known to me.

2. Having brought water from a river, having charged it with 27 repetitions of the mantra, use it for washing the face. People who see you will be subjugated.
3. Taking the dust from a woman's left foot, repeat the mantra near an idol of Gaṇeśa 12,000 times to attract this woman.
4. Having made an idol of Gaṇeśa from the wood of a Nimba tree broken by an elephant or the root of the white Arka tree, worship it with red materials on the night of the fourth lunar day of either half of the month. After repeating the mantra 1,000 times, throw the idol on the banks of a river at night. Gaṇeśa will tell you in a dream about the desired object.
5. By performing a fire sacrifice with sacrificial sticks of the Nimba tree, one eradicates enemies; with sticks of the Vajrī plant, one liquidates enemies.
6. Having charged a monkey bone with the mantra, throw it in the enemy's house to eradicate him.
7. Having charged a human bone with the mantra, throw it in the house of a girl to obtain her.
8. Make a doll from the dust of a woman's left foot and potter's clay. Write the woman's name on the doll's heart. After charging the doll as well as Nimba sticks, bury them in the ground. The woman will become mad, and when the doll and Nimba sticks have been dug out, she will be normal.
9. The same rite can be performed with garlic instead of Nimba sticks. The doll is to be put in a vessel covered with a lid and buried near the door of the enemy's house to eradicate him within a fortnight.
10. When in trouble, worship an idol of Gaṇeśa from the wood of the white Arka tree or the Ariṣṭa plant with red sandalwood paste and other articles of worship; put the idol in a vessel filled with liquor and bury it at the place of worship. Sitting down at this spot, repeat the mantra day and night to destroy obstacles after seven days.
11. Take dust from the left foot of a wicked woman, dirt from your own body, and potter's clay; make an idol of Gaṇeśa from it, put it in a vessel filled with liquor and bury it in the ground. Perform a fire sacrifice with 1,000 oleander flowers at this spot to subjugate this woman.

Mantra: 32 syllables (source?). This mantra is similar to the previous one:

oṃ hastimukhāya lambodarāya ucchiṣṭamahātmane
āṃ kroṃ hrīṃ klīṃ hrīṃ huṃ ghe ghe ucchiṣṭāya svāhā

"Oṃ svāhā to the one who has an elephant face (and) a protruding belly, to the great-souled Ucchiṣṭa, āṃ kroṃ hrīṃ klīṃ hrīṃ huṃ ghe ghe, (svāhā) to Ucchiṣṭa."

Seer, etc.: no details

14a-i.

Other sources: Next to Mahā-Gaṇapati, Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati is the most important form of Gaṇeśa worshipped today. This form is to be worshipped in a ritually impure state (ucchiṣṭa),[8] e.g. by leaving remnants of food in the mouth at the time of worship. Similarly, there is the worship of Ucchiṣṭa-Cāṇḍālinī, a form of the goddess Mātaṅgī, and Ucchiṣṭa-Bhairava (cf. Kulārṇavatantra 7.60 and 8.28). In the secondary literature on iconography the term Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati is often applied to forms of Gaṇapati with a consort shown touching each other's sex-organ and not actually engaged in sexual intercourse. By contrast, forms a-e of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati in the VT are not accompanied by a consort, and form h (and probably f and g) is said to be actually engaged in intercourse with a consort. Generally, the attributes of these forms described in the secondary literature do not agree with the ones described in the texts for Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati.

A separate sect of worshippers of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati belonging to the left-hand path of Tantrism is described in Anantānandagiri's Śaṃkaravijaya, pp. 87, 8 - 88, 23.[9] It is said to have a sub-sect that worships Heramba. In this text a certain Herambasuta propounds the teaching that Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati is the highest deity, of whom all other gods are aspects. A great number of *mantra*s and *stotra*s of this deity exists. Among these are two

8. The etymological connection between ucchiṣṭa and the term ucchuṣma (cf. Atharvaveda-Pariśiṣṭa, ch. 36: ucchuṣmakalpa) which Mitra 1958, p. 54, note 8, suggests cannot be proved.

9. For the six sects of worshippers of Gaṇapati, cf. p. 15.

versions of an Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati-Sahasranāma.[10] The peculiarity in the recitation is, according to the second version (4.144), that the devotee recites the 1,000 names naked in company of a consort after intercourse; according to the second version (verses 191 ff.), he recites the names while touching his consort's sex-organ and finally has intercourse with her.

Because of the vastness of the material, only parallels to the *mantra*s occurring in the VT are provided below, not other *mantra*s of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati known from other texts, which are usually only variants of the above listed *mantra*s.

Ad mantra 14a: This mantra occurs also in ĪŚP 1.16.78-79 (the seer is Kiṣkindha); TS, p. 115, 5; TSS 24.43 (the seer is Kiṣkindha); MT 20.1 (said to belong to the uttarāmnāya); NP 68.61; MMD 2.31-32; and MM, p. 60,19.

Ad mantra 14b-d: no parallel.

Ad mantra 14e: This mantra occurs also in NP 68.59-60 (without oṃ); MMD 2.51-52 (without oṃ); and MM, p. 62, 8 (printed with oṃ).

Ad mantra 14f: This mantra occurs also in MT 20.28 (said to belong to the uttarāmnāya); NP 68.61-62; MMD 2.53; and MM, p. 62, 31.

Ad mantra 14g: The mantra occurs also in MMD 2.55 and MM, p. 63, 8.

Ad mantra 14h: This mantra occurs in MMD 2.57-59 and MM, p. 63, 16.

Ad mantra 14i: The mantra occurs in MT 20.33-34 (said to belong to the uttarāmnāya); MMD 2.84-85; and MM, p. 64, 16.

The VT describes three *dhyāna*s of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati corresponding to the given *mantra*s:

1. *mantra*s 14a-d: dhyāna like Vakratuṇḍa-Gaṇapati (= section 13) Cf. also MT 20.3.

10. One version named Ucchiṣṭagaṇapatisahasranāmastotra, attributed to the Rudrayāmala-Tantra, appears on fols. 62b-80b of a collection of texts related to the worship of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati (Bombay, 1985, reprint). The second version, ascribed to the Haramekhalā-Tantra, has been edited by RAGHAVAN from a single manuscript (Madras, 1959).

2. mantras 14e: Unmatta-Gaṇapati

   Cf. also TS, p. 115, 10-11; MMD 2.32; and MM, p. 60, 25-26 (but this dhyāna is assigned to the mantra occurring under 14a), and ŚR 2.25.56 (called "Bīja-Gaṇapati", is golden).

3. mantras 14h (mantras 14f, g, and i not specified):

   Cf. also the dhyānas in PSSS, p. 471, 8-12 (assigned to a different mantra); MMD 2.61; and MM, p. 63, 25.

Three more descriptions of Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati can be found in other sources:

Type 1: holds 1. blue lotus, 2. pomegranate, 3. vīṇā, 4. rice shoot, 5. rosary (the second attribute is probably to be held in the trunk); is blue.

KKD (quoted in Rao 1914-16, 1, appendix C, p. 10); ŚTN 3.77; Ajitāgama, vol. 3, 55.9; and Dhyānamālā 8.

Type 2: holds 1. tusk, 2. rosary, 3. axe, 4. modaka; sits on a rat. DMP 8.26.

Type 3: holds 1. noose, 2. goad, 3. mace, 4. gesture of protection; has three eyes, drinks liquor with the tip of his trunk. Śaṃkaravijaya, p. 87, 18-19.

PLATE 8. Yantra 8 (for 14e. Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati)

PLATE 9. Ekākṣara-Gaṇapati drawn by M.G. Sthapati as found in STHAPATI 1981. The order of the attributes held in the deity's lower hands differs from the description in the VT: L 2 shows the wish-granting gesture and R 2 holds the tusk (ad p. 36).

PLATE 10. Fig. 1: Lakṣmī-Gaṇapati as depicted in an edition of the Mantraratnākara, p. 79, to illustrate the description in MMD 2.101. The illustration shows the attributes in an order different from the description in the VT. While the VT states that Lakṣmī embraces Gaṇapati with her right hand and holds a lotus in her left, she is shown here holding a lotus in R 1 and L 1 and showing the wish-granting gesture (?) with L 2 and the gesture of protection with R 2 (ad p. 44).

Fig. 2: Ucchiṣṭa-Gaṇapati (= 14h. Unmatta-Gaṇapati) as depicted in an edition of the Mantraratnākara, p. 79 (ad p. 97).

PLATE 11. Mahā-Gaṇapati, in the private possession of Dr. D.G. Kelkar, Pune. The sculpture agrees with the description in the VT (ad p. 63).
